

2 indicted in backdating of Nixon papers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Watergate grand jury Wednesday indicted an attorney and a document appraiser for their parts in backdating former President Richard M. Nixon's gift of vice presidential papers to the National Archives.

The Nixon's 1969 tax return showed the gift, valued at $367,000, was made March 27, 1969. Actually, the papers granting the gift were signed and notarized April 10, 1970 — well after Congress passed a law sharply cutting back tax benefits for gifts made after July 23, 1969.

The indictment named Los Angeles attorney Frank DeMarco Jr., 49, and Chicago appraiser Ralph G. Newman, 63.

Former White House deputy assistant Edward L. Morgan, who already has pleaded guilty for his part in backdating the gift, was named an unindicted co-conspirator. Morgan was sentenced in December to four months in prison and 20 months probation.

DEMARCO WAS charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States, making false statements to the Internal Revenue Service, and obstructing an inquiry of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

Frank DeMarco Jr.

Ralph G. Newman

Newman was charged with conspiracy to defraud, and with assisting in the preparation of a false document filed with a federal income-tax return.

The court said conviction for conspiracy to defraud and for making false statements to the IRS carry maximum penalties of five years and a $10,000 fine on each count; obstructing a congressional inquiry five years and $5,000; and assisting in preparing a false statement three years and $5,000.

IN A STATEMENT from his Los Angeles law office, DeMarco said he had a "strange feeling of relief" in knowing the matter was about to come to some form of final resolution.

"I have been living under a cloud of doubt for over a year ever since Mr. Nixon's tax troubles first came to light and I welcome the chance to vindicate myself," he said.

"I have done nothing wrong. I have conspired with no one, in my judgment. I have made some mistakes but they were neither intentional nor criminal."

After the IRS ruled against Nixon's deductions, he agreed to pay almost $500,000 in back taxes and interest penalties. He said his personal savings would be "virtually wiped out."

NIXON'S pre-presidential papers were moved to storage facilities under control of the General Services Administration March 26-27, 1969. But this act itself was not claimed to constitute the "gift," the indictment said, adding that DeMarco, Newman and Morgan took various parts in having a Nixon deed actually transferring the material to the government fraudulently backdated to March 27, 1969.

The IRS audit division began a readout of the Nixon tax returns Dec. 7, 1973, and continued into 1974. The GSA and the joint congressional committee entered the investigation in 1974 at the request of Nixon.

The indictment said that during these investigations, "the conspirators would conceal and cause the concealment of various documents . . ." and "would destroy and cause the destruction of other such documents."

Newman known for Abe work

Ralph G. Newman, indicted Wednesday in the backdating of former President Richard M. Nixon's vice presidential papers, is a historian most noted for his dissertations on the life and times of Abraham Lincoln and his accounts of the Civil War.

Newman, president of the board of the Chicago Public Library and a private bookseller, served as appraiser for numerous American Presidents and was paid more than $12,000 for the work he did for Nixon.

The papers, Newman said later, were probably worth more than the $576,000 he said they were worth in 1970. He has estimated their revised worth at more than $1 million.

Newman, 63, attended four colleges and received doctor of letters and doctor of laws degrees. He is the founder of the Abraham Lincoln Book Shop Inc., Chicago, owner of the Americana House Publishing Co., and recipient of several awards for his literary work, including several books he authored or edited.

During the government's study of the claimed deduction, IRS investigators urged a grand jury be impaneled to investigate DeMarco, Newman and Morgan.

The investigators said if Nixon's aides could be compelled to testify, they could

"possibly connect the taxpayer with the preparation of the return" — thus providing the basis for a fraud penalty against Nixon. The question became moot when President Ford pardoned Nixon Sept. 9 for all Watergate-related offenses.

Completion expected within year

Village seeks construction bids for works garage

Buffalo Grove officials are seeking construction bids for a new public works garage and hope the long-delayed building can be completed within a year.

The village board Tuesday decided to begin the bidding after reviewing a zoning board of appeals recommendation for a special use on the 4-acre site for the facility across from the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd.

Village Mgr. Daniel Larson said officials want to move construction along as quickly as possible so the garage can be in service by next January.

Officials said Tuesday they also hope construction crews can have the facility "under roof" by November so work will not be delayed by winter weather later this year.

THE VILLAGE is paying close to $570,000 for the facility, almost entirely with federal revenue-sharing funds.

Earlier this year cost projections were set at about $529,000, but basement area has been added to the design accounting for the extra cost. The basement area will be used as a police pistol range and for limited storage.

Larson said the village has about $250,000 in revenue-sharing money on hand and will secure the rest through a loan that will be paid back with future revenue-sharing funds.

Buffalo Grove received about $85,000 yearly in federal revenue-sharing funds.

The facility will be a long-awaited form of relief for the village's public works department. The building is designed to house the department's 40 vehicles and other equipment now stored outdoors by park district offices because of a lack of space.

ORIGINALLY, officials planned to spend $396,000 on the building, but rising costs over the last year forced a reduction of some 10,000 square feet in its size as a money-saving measure.

Plans for the garage have been before the village board for more than a year, but delays resulted because of disagreements over its location. More recently, the village had some problems obtaining title to the land.

Tuesday, the board also awarded bids for installation and purchase of a new Civil-Defense warning siren system.

Great Lakes Fire and Safety Equipment, Barrington, is selling Buffalo Grove the system for $14,595 while Thorne Electric Co., Wheaton, will install it for $5,947.

The sirens will be located in the north end of the village by the Raupp Memorial Museum on Dunham Lane, near the White Pine Ditch area on White Pine Road and in the Cambridge-on-the-Lake subdivision on Harvard Lane.

THE SIRENS will be used only to alert residents to tornado warnings, when one has been sighted in the area, said Larson. They will be activated from the police department where tornado information is received from the National Weather Service and the Illinois State Police.

The sirens will be operational by July and Larson said they also will be tested once a month.

A federal matching grant is helping pay for the sirens along with funds from Buffalo Grove's regular Civil Defense budget.

Solutions don't come easily, but proposals abound...

by KAREN BLECHA

Last of a series

If some doctors have their way, an arbitration board would decide how much money you could collect for medical malpractice.

If lawyers have their way, filing a lawsuit still would be the way to get compensation.

Arbitration and continued use of the courts are only two solutions proposed to the crisis caused by the rapid rise in medical malpractice suits and the high cost of malpractice insurance. Proposals include:

• Voluntary or mandatory arbitration. A patient would sign an agreement to submit any malpractice claims to arbitration rather than court. A board of doctors, attorneys and laymen would hear charges and make judgments. Some proposals include setting a $200,000 limit on awards. Some set specific damages which would be awarded each injury.

The Illinois Hospital Assn. and Illinois State Medical Society favor trying out

such a plan that they believe would speed handling of claims and possibly save money. The Chicago and Illinois Bar Associations oppose it because they do not think a patient would get as good a deal before a panel of arbitrators as they would in court.

• No-fault insurance. Physicians or patients would buy insurance under which aggrieved patients could collect for malpractice, based on an injury-damages schedule, without trial and without large lawyers' fees.

Opponents, including insurance companies, say there is no way to define what would be compensable injury under no-fault. Doctors believe the compensation should include medical expenses and loss of wages but none for pain and suffering because they say it is impossible to evaluate.

Proponents say local medical societies could define the injuries they would pay for.

• Establishment of state Commissions (Continued on Page 15)

Filing suit against a doctor or hospital is not the only way to get results on a medical complaint.

Four hospitals in the Northwest suburbs have patient-relations programs to take care of gripes. People with complaints about their doctors can go to the Chicago Medical Society or the Illinois Dept. of Education and Registration.

"We would prefer that patients come to us before going to court," said Brother Felix Bettendorf, president-chief executive officer at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village. He said patients with complaints can report them to the administration or to the medical director of the hospital.

AT HOLY FAMILY Hospital in Des Plaines, a patient with a complaint can take it to the nurse-in-charge or to one of the nine assigned to patient relations. If a patient cannot get satisfaction, he can take his complaint to administration.

"If a patient falls or is injured in the hospital he would receive medical care and an X-ray to determine the extent of injury at no charge," said Jim McQuaid, hospital spokesman.

"We also have a safety committee that investigates complaints."

McQuaid and Ann Flinney, in charge of patient relations at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, suggest patients with complaints about their doctors talk it over with the doctor first. Mrs. Flinney said a patient can file a written complaint with the hospital medical staff.

GRIEVANCES ABOUT physicians are investigated by the Chicago Medical Society, which tries to act as mediator between patient and physician, said Lee Forres, assistant to the executive administrator.

"We do not have any power or authority over doctors," he said. "But about 75 per cent of the time our mediation works."

If a patient with a serious complaint cannot get action, he can take his grievance to the Dept. of Education and Registration, which licenses doctors in Illinois.

On a formal complaint, a hearing would be held before the medical-licensing committee, which has the power to revoke a doctor's license.

Carroll
Juckett

John W. Carroll

John W. (Bill) Carroll of Park Ridge, who served 16 years in the Illinois General Assembly before his retirement in 1972, has been named "interim" successor to Rep. Robert S. Juckett, R-Park Ridge, who died Feb. 2. Carroll, 67, said Wednesday he will serve only Juckett's unexpired 4th District term and will not seek a full term in 1976. He said he had no specific legislative proposals, but "I will just work for what over the people in the district seem to need most."

Arlington police join FOP

Members of the Arlington Heights Police Dept. have organized a chapter of the Fraternal Order of Police union. Twenty-nine of the department's 54 patrolmen have joined, and 20 attended the first general meeting Wednesday night. Patrolman Robert Gerth, president of the local chapter, said the union was organized "to unify the policemen on this department . . . and to serve the people of Arlington Heights a hell of a lot better." He said the organization is "not militant. As long as I am president, there will never be a strike, any blue flu or a ticket blitz."

Centel employees back at work

Striking employees of the Central Illinois Telephone Co. returned to work Wednesday following a one-day wildcat strike in which 450 employees walked off the job. Formal grievances over working conditions were filed with the company by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 336, which represents workers at the company. Neither union or company officials could estimate how long it would take to resolve the dispute. The company serves about 70,000 customers in Des Plaines, Park Ridge and Mount Prospect. Telephone service was not interrupted by the walkout.

Northwest group trim sought

A proposal to trim the Northwest Municipal Conference from 16 to 9 communities was submitted Wednesday night, but action was deferred to a later meeting. Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones recommended the changes to eliminate the fringe communities of the Northwest suburban area and develop a well-funded, productive group, he said. Communities to be cut would be Barrington, Des Plaines, Hanover Park, Niles, Park Ridge, Streamwood and Inverness. Cuts would be made on a geographical basis only, Jones said.

State conservation aide indicted

The assistant director of the Illinois Dept. of Conservation, Harold Ellsworth, 38, Springfield, was indicted Wednesday for allegedly lying to a federal grand jury investigating kickbacks. Ellsworth was charged with six counts of perjury. The government said in its indictment Ellsworth lied when he denied receiving $950 and a shotgun from a chemical salesman in return for introducing him to representatives of local area housing representatives.

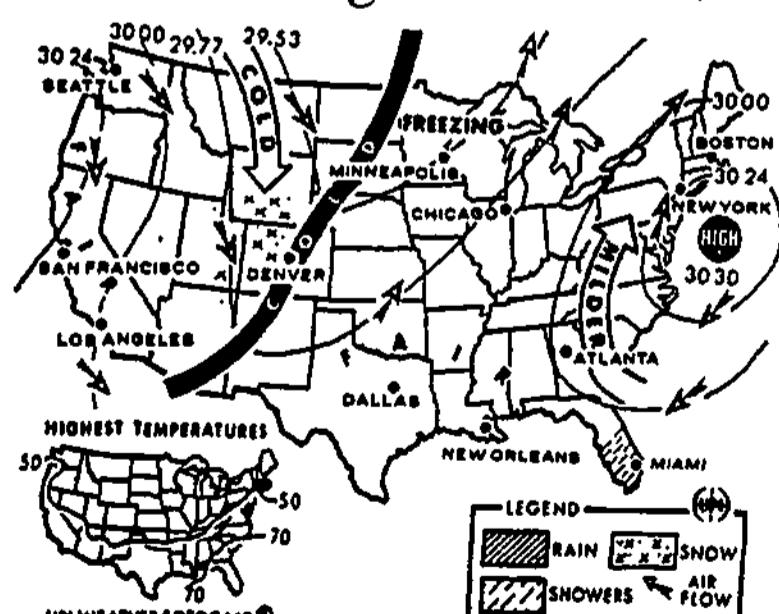

WHIP would make changes

Wheeling Improvement Party candidates said Wednesday night they would make changes in the village administration if elected, but denied reports of a "housecleaning." WHIP candidates who are opposing two other states in the scandal-ridden village, said they would evaluate the efficiency and effectiveness of village employees to see where changes are needed.

Dan Ryan must be resurfaced

The Illinois Dept. of Transportation said today materials used to resurface the Chicago area's Dan Ryan Expressway did not meet state standards and will have to be replaced at no cost to the state. A department investigation found that there was "insufficient compactness" and variation in the content of the mix used to repair worn sections. The investigation showed feelings and ravelings of the new surface were found in 30 isolated spots on the Dan Ryan.

County tax hike seen next year

Spending increases in the proposed county budget will cost the average homeowner about $4 in extra taxes next year, the Civic Federation predicted Wednesday.

Increases in employees' salaries, building rental and bond interest will create a record $149 million budget, William McGlone of the taxpayers' watchdog group said at the County Board's public budget hearing.

"If there's no change in the gross equalized assessed valuation of the county, a $4 per $10,000 assessed valuation tax increase is likely," he said.

THE POSSIBLE tax increase is based on the county's $23 billion assessed real estate valuation in 1973. Totals for 1974 have not been released. McGlone said he "will not hazard a guess" about 1975 totals, which will determine the tax rate paid in 1976.

"Valuation will go up in the suburbs," he said. "But, it could go down drastically in the city."

McGlone said, "There is a possibility that the tax rate (of $4 per $10,000 assessed valuation) will remain the same."

The board will vote Monday on the budget submitted by County Board Pres. George Dunne.

Flood said correctional officers in County Jail, who will receive a 9 per cent hike, may reject the salary package at a meeting next week. The correctional officers are seeking salaries equal to the $11,148 to $16,000 wages of sheriff's deputies. The correctional officers now receive about $2,000 a year less than the deputies.

During an afternoon hearing on the County Hospital Governing Commission's $150 million budget, which includes an increase of $21 million for 1975, community organizations representing poor, black and Indian county residents asked the board to continue current services at County Hospital.

County board members have criticized the budget for large salary increases, waste and high administrative costs. Last year the board forced the governing commission to cut more than $2 million from its budget.

"There may be money going down a rat hole," Comr. Hal Tyrrell of Proviso Township said.

McGlone said, "There is a possibility that the tax rate (of $4 per $10,000 assessed valuation) will remain the same."

The board will vote Monday on the budget submitted by County Board Pres. George Dunne.

Senate suspends tax on oil; veto vowed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted Wednesday to suspend the administration's tax on imported oil in a power showdown which apparently killed a key provision of President Ford's energy program.

Ford said immediately he would veto the bill. But administration forces conceded, in advance, there was no hope to sustain the veto in the House and the 66-28 margin by which the Senate approved the suspension appeared to have doomed Ford's hopes of salvaging the tax.

"I regret today's vote by the Senate but do not regard it as final," Ford said in a statement. "I intend to veto this legislation."

"I believe the Congress will ultimately respond to the will of the American people and serve national rather than narrow interests. I will continue to work with Congress to this end."

"I intend to veto this legislation. I could not do otherwise and be faithful to my oath of office."

Democrats and Republicans agreed that the Senate vote on overriding the veto would be close.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said before the vote, "If we can muster 30 votes today, then there is a good chance the President's veto can be sustained."

But the administration fell two votes short and there appeared to be virtually no chance to switch the votes needed to sustain the veto.

The Senate approved the suspension, passed earlier by the House, after rejecting Republican moves to allow some of the tax to remain in effect.

By executive order, Ford imposed a $1 a barrel tax on imported oil Feb. 1 which would climb to $3 a barrel April 1.

The three-tier tax was imposed in an effort to drive down consumption of oil products, especially gasoline.

In other economic matters:

Americans earned less money in January, the government said Wednesday, and Chrysler Corp.'s shareholders were told they would not get a dividend for the first time since the Great Depression.

In Washington, Henry Ford II, chairman of Ford Motor Co., and Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Auto Workers, warned of even harder times ahead.

The Commerce Department reported that American wage earners' pay decreased in January for the third consecutive month and farmers' income dropped for the fourth month in a row.

At the same time, total personal income, including wages, retirement and welfare benefits, interest payments, and rent, rose an unusually low 0.2 per cent. In December, overall personal income was up 0.5 per cent.

The administration is counting on an increase in personal incomes to encourage consumer spending to help spur the economy.

In New York, Chrysler's board of directors omitted paying a regular quarterly dividend for the first time since 1938. Earlier, General Motors reduced its dividend to 60 cents from 85 cents, and American Motors omitted paying it. Ford had not yet reported its earnings or its dividend plans.

"In my 30 years as a businessman, I have never before felt so uncertain and so troubled about the future of both my country and my company," Henry Ford told Congress' Joint Economic Committee.

Woodcock, who also appeared before the committee, and Ford urged government turn its attention to reducing mushrooming unemployment. More than 200,000 autoworkers have been laid off indefinitely in the recession.

Woodcock, calling President Ford's economic-energy package "tardy and inadequate," said unemployment may rise to 9 or 10 per cent unless something is done immediately.

Also in the news Wednesday:

The House Ways and Means Committee gave final approval to a $21.3 billion measure to rebate up to $200 to every taxpayer this year and further cut taxes in 1975. But when committee members again turned back liberal efforts to attach an amendment ending the oil depletion allowance, it meant that a fight over the loophole could delay House action on the tax cut bill.

News that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger returned with some new

Middle East peace proposals sparked a late rally on the New York Stock Exchange. The Dow Jones average finished up 5.09 points at 736.39. Standard & Poor's Index increased 0.51 to 81.44. The average price of an NYSE common share increased by 14 cents. Declines edged advances, 711 to 667, among the 1,800 issues traded.

The Federal Reserve in New York has poured billions of dollars into the economy in recent months to fight recession, but the nation's money supply actually has declined, according to government figures. The supply fell 0.6 per cent in the last three months because consumers and businesses are saving instead of spending, the Fed says.

Rocky: face it, we're in tough times

unaware of all it is doing — has led to a growing sense of frustration among Americans.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller warned Wednesday there is no quick cure for the nation's economic ailments, even if Congress acts quickly on President Ford's program.

Speaking in the morning to businessmen and later to the nation's governors, Rockefeller said the nation must go through a period of belt tightening, and Congress must overhaul many costly programs before the economy can be turned around.

"Face it, we're in tough times," Rockefeller said. "It's going to take time, it's not going to happen overnight."

"For too long Congress has been passing legislation with wonderful objectives without realizing the long term implications," he said. He added that even if Congress acted quickly on Ford's economic program, or adopted one of its own, it would not bring a rapid end to inflation, recession and unemployment.

Later he told the National Governors Conference that big, costly, overlapping government — unaware of all it is doing — has led to a growing sense of frustration among Americans.

One of the reasons he resigned as governor of New York State last year, Rockefeller said, was that "less and less was I able to be responsive to my own constituency both in terms of decision-making and the operations of government."

Kissinger reports peace progress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, returning from a 10-day Middle East mission, said Wednesday he had made progress toward a "framework" for peace and promised close contact with the Soviet Union as negotiations continue.

Before reporting the results of his shuttle diplomacy to President Ford, Kissinger said, "I believe we have made some progress towards establishing a framework for negotiations in the Middle East and I plan to return there in a few weeks to see what can be accomplished to complete it."

And, he told reporters at the airport, "We will stay in close contact with the Soviet leaders as we negotiate another step in the Middle East and also in the preparation of a final settlement" of differences between Israel and the Arab nations.

Kissinger also planned to report good progress toward a common strategy on energy with America's major European allies including France, his last stop on a nine-nation mission which took him 15,335 miles in 10 days.

A senior official aboard Kissinger's plane said the secretary had been in almost daily contact with the principal Middle East leaders ever since leaving the area on Saturday. The official said Kissinger's exploratory mission "pretty well clarified the range" in which an agreement must be found on a further withdrawal east of the Suez Canal.

Next month's trip will be the crucial

U. S. evacuating Americans from Asmara

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — The United States is evacuating the last of its nationals from the Eritrean capital of Asmara, fearing the situation may deteriorate further and lead to reprisals against Americans, diplomatic sources said Wednesday.

The sources said small groups of Americans have been evacuated from civil-war-torn provincial capital in northern Ethiopia in the past week until now there are "less than 30 Americans left in the city."

These are mainly consular officials with a scattering of businessmen and Department of defense contract workers. When fighting broke out in Asmara Jan. 31 there were more than 300 Americans and their dependents living in the Eritrean capital.

More clashes were reported inside Asmara during the day, following heavy attacks by rebel infiltrators against government installations during the night. Diplomatic sources said the guerrillas had inflicted heavy casualties on a 600-man convoy of government regulars north of the city.

The decision to evacuate virtually all the Americans was taken because Washington feared the fighting between Eritrean secessionist rebels and government troops would escalate and Americans and this may be decided this weekend at a special meeting in Washington — the remaining Americans in Asmara could become the revenge targets of the rebels who are able to infiltrate the city at will.

According to sources here the Americans have left only a "few watchmen" at a formerly important communications station in Asmara and other installations and have evacuated the rest of the technicians.

one for his step-by-step diplomacy and officials described the negotiations as "tortuous."

Statements from both Israel and Egypt since Kissinger left showed a softening in the previously hard public positions by both sides, but there were warning signs that Syria is lobbying the other Arab states in opposition to a new Egyptian-Israeli accord.

From Israel, Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Mordechai Gur said an agreement with Egypt was even more important than keeping the strategic Mitla and Gidi passes in the Sinai desert. The passes and the Abu Rudeis oilfields are the key to the agreement.

From Egypt, President Anwar Sadat suggested that the United States stand as a guarantor of an Arab pledge not to attack Israel while the search for peace continues.

Even the reports that President Hafez Assad is trying to raise support against the agreement only reflected the impression of some progress that Kissinger mentioned on his arrival.

Panel to probe all intelligence units

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House established a special committee Wednesday to investigate all government intelligence agencies, including the CIA.

On a 236-120 vote, the House established a Select Committee on Intelligence to be composed of seven Democrats and three Republicans, disregarding GOP charges the committee membership was stacked against them.

The committee's composition as finally adopted almost exactly reflected the party division in the House as a whole.

Earlier, House Republicans had charged the Democrats with trying to create a "stacked deck" aimed at limiting the investigation only to intelligence operations under the Nixon administration.

ute appeal by Rep. Mildred Fenwick, R-N.Y., for Speaker Carl Albert to appoint four Republicans instead of three.

She contended the move "would convince the people of the nation that we can rise above party, that we are seeking the truth."

The measure in its final form set no limits on how far back the committee may probe, but neither did it stipulate how far back its investigations must go.

Albert promptly appointed Rep. Lucien N. Nedzi, D-Mich., chairman of the committee — the third special panel named in recent weeks to investigate the CIA.

Joey the 'miracle child' wins bout with cancer

• Six-year-old Joey Schillaci beat cancer. Now he wants to beat his pal, Gary Anderson, at ice hockey. Joey recently made his last trip to Mott Children's Hospital in Ann Arbor and was tested for any remaining traces of neuroblastoma, a usually fatal form of cancer found only in children. He was pronounced cured and they call him a "miracle child." In 1969, when Joey — son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schillaci — was stricken, doctors operated and told the boy's parents the child's bones and liver had been affected and he wouldn't last the year. Mrs. Schillaci said the doctors just said "Keep the faith and feed the baby" and that's what we did." Mrs. Schillaci said the doctors used experimental drugs.

Schaumburg bank dealings with 2nd troubled firm told

by PAT GERLACH

A second case of questionable financial dealings between the Schaumburg State Bank and a company that received bank loans while heading into financial difficulties has come to light.

The four loans, totaling $25,500, were made in 1972 and 1973 to Hedges Manufacturing Co., Forest Park. Three of the loans came at a time when the bank controlled the company as trustee of trust formed by the firm's late owner.

The fourth was made after the trust sold its stock in the company and bank officials acknowledged in court documents that Hedges was in serious financial trouble, court records show.

Operations of the company by the bank led to charges of mismanagement in a lawsuit filed by beneficiaries of the trust. Settlement of the suit has cost bank stockholders more than $163,000, reducing the bank's 1974 net income by 60 percent, the annual report of the bank has disclosed.

ONE OF THE ORIGINAL defendants

in the suit was Ward Weaver, then president of the bank, who joined the Hedges board of directors after the bank as trustee took control of the company.

Weaver's purchase of a Schaumburg business that had gone heavily into debt at the bank came under scrutiny of a federal grand jury in 1973. The company, Suburban Aquatics Inc., later went bankrupt. No action was taken by the grand jury and Weaver denied any wrongdoing.

The Hedges stock was included in the estate of Alice Blide, company president who died in 1970. Beneficiaries of the Schaumburg State Bank trust, which held 95 percent of the stock, were Mrs. Blide's daughters, Nancy Janzen of Chicago and Bonnie Ellis of Battle Creek, Mich.

The remaining five percent of the stock was owned by their cousin, Harry Hedberg of North Riverside, who was vice president of the company.

Weaver and William Kaiser Jr., a bank director and executor of Mrs. Blide's estate, were appointed to the Hedges board of directors after Mrs. Blide's death "in order to find out what was going on and to represent the bank's interest," Weaver said in a recent interview.

BY 1972, THE COMPANY was in financial difficulty. The bank made loans to Hedges in January and in August, court records show. In September the sisters filed suit against the bank, charging that bank officials mismanaged the company.

They asked $200,000 damages, charging that losses for 1972 were in excess of $100,000 and represented more than 50 percent of the company's net worth. They charged this was the company's first loss since its founding in 1949.

Also named as defendants in the suit were Kaiser and Weaver, although Weaver was later dropped from the case through an agreement between the plaintiffs and defendants.

Records indicate that Kaiser, in turn, later filed suit against Hedberg, charging he diverted business from the company through unfair business practices. Hedberg has since opened an office equipment manufacturing company in Broadview.

THE BANK MADE another loan to Hedges in November. In January 1973 it was given court permission to sell the trust's Hedges stock after bank officials told the court that Hedges "has been steadily losing money and is without sufficient working capital to continue to meet its payroll and obligations."

The sale was made to Richard Moellering, 355 S. Lincoln Ln., Arlington Heights. The sisters later charged that the bank officials unloaded the stock to Moellering for $70,000, less than the $203,000 value put on the stock by the Internal Revenue Service after Mrs. Blide's death.

Court records show a fourth Schaumburg State Bank loan to Hedges in March 1973.

In July, Moellering filed for reorganization of the company under federal bankruptcy statutes. The company listed assets of $297,000 and liabilities of $334,000. Schaumburg State Bank is among the firm's major creditors, with most of its $25,000 in loans still due.

Moellering has declined to comment about the company, which has been moved to Woodstock, Ill.

WEAVER, found innocent last year of federal charges of conspiracy and bank fraud, is no longer an officer or director of the bank. He said he is a real estate consultant to Brandel Enterprises, owned by Paul W. Brandel, president of Schaumburg State Bank.

Weaver refused to discuss the bank loans to Hedges, explaining "that's bank business and, as such, confidential."

He said the bank agreed to an out-of-court settlement in December 1974, "because the legal fees were getting so high," but added that throughout most of the two years of litigation, "we thought we had a good chance to win the suit."

Weaver had been indicted by a federal grand jury in May 1972 on charges of making false entries in bank records. He was found innocent of all charges during a trial last year.

LEMOINE STITT, an Arlington Heights attorney who represented the bank in the suit, said some of the money obtained through the loans was used by Hedges as working capital.

"I wouldn't say the bank was lending money to itself, though, because the corporation is distinctly separate from the trust," Stitt said, adding that the loans were approved by the bank's loan committee.

Stitt said there is no similarity between the Hedges situation and that of Suburban Aquatics, a wholesale tropical fish firm that accumulated substantial debts at Schaumburg State Bank and was then purchased by Weaver.

At a time when the company owed the bank about $16,000, Weaver bought the firm for $7,000 but the check was immediately turned back to the bank as payment for some of the debts.

Weaver later took in several partners, one of whom eventually took over sole ownership of Suburban Aquatics because he objected to the company's mounting debts. The company filed for bankruptcy in October 1973. The bank was not listed among its creditors.

Who said boxing is a dying sport?

Former champ finds kids who think it's fun

THE PROPER boxing gear may look awkward on a youngster this size, but it is part of the training offered through the Mount Prospect Park District.

There were no winners and no losers Saturday when 20 young boxers met to show off their pugilistic skills in the basement of the Lions Park Recreation Center.

The matches, designed to allow parents to see their children's progress, were primarily sparring. The boxing show was the end product of several weeks of work through the Mount Prospect Park District boxing program, which is the brainchild of Farouk Hassan, a former professional boxer.

The program began about a year ago when Hassan approached a park board member about starting a boxing program. Hassan worked with the park district's Greg Repede to develop the program which has attracted about 25 to 30 boys for each 10-week session.

Repede said the park district was probably the first in the area to begin a boxing program. He said he looked for other programs when he needed information on starting a boxing program, but couldn't find any. "Mr. Hassan hadn't taught the program before so he wasn't real sure what he needed or how it would work," Repede said.

MORE RECENTLY, Repede said he has noticed that other park districts are beginning to offer boxing programs. "I've seen a couple in brochures more recently," he said.

Hassan, who was a Golden Gloves winner in Detroit, uses two assistants to help coach youngsters 10 years and older. While the entire group works out together, the youngsters are divided according to age and ability.

One of the assistants, Jerry Lee, also provided the park district with its first boxing ring. Lee constructed the ring himself and donated it to the park district. The ring can be put up and taken down for other activities in the basement.

Repede said the boxing program is an experiment that has been successful. "They enjoy it," he said of those who participate in the program. "We have a number of kids who have been with it the whole time."

Void judge survey, panel to urge

by STEVE FORSYTH

A committee of the Northwest Suburban Bar Assn. tonight is expected to ask association officials to nullify results of a survey among lawyers that found two Northwest suburban associate judges "not qualified" to stay on the bench.

A unanimous petition from the criminal law committee of the association will ask that the survey be thrown out and a new poll be taken with different guidelines.

The survey of association members found associate judges John L. Limpertis of the 2nd Municipal District and James Maher Jr., of the 3rd Municipal District, "not qualified" for retention because they received less than 66 per cent of the votes cast.

Since then, one suburban attorney who asked to remain anonymous reported receiving a call from Limpertis. He said Limpertis asked him to send a letter endorsing Limpertis to the Chicago Bar Assn. The Chicago Bar will make recommendations to Circuit Court judges for their vote on retention of the associate judges.

LIMPERTIS DENIED Wednesday that he called the attorney to solicit an endorsement.

"I didn't call anyone to write letters," he said. "I understand some members of the criminal law committee were asking people to write letters."

"I don't want to make a big whoop-de-do about this," he said.

The criminal law committee wants ballots in future surveys certified to assure that only association members vote, and a requirement that only attorneys who have appeared a certain number of times before a judge be allowed to vote on that judge's qualifications.

Several attorneys who practice before the judges said they did not receive ballots, and they made several other charges at the criminal law committee meeting last week. The meeting was to be open to the press, but the members voted against the open session before they started their discussion.

Other members of the association said the objecting attorneys are not dues-paying members and thus were not listed on the mailing roster used for the balloting.

Charles E. Whelan Jr., chairman of the criminal law committee, released the findings of the committee this week. He said the other committee members charged that there were several irregularities in the voting, including:

- Ballots were required to be returned so quickly that attorneys did not have time to study them thoroughly, and some were not counted because they arrived after the ballot deadline.

- All members were allowed to vote on the judges even though they may not have practiced before them.

- Ballots were not certified and could have been "bogus."

- Voting was not reflective of the association because of the manner in which the balloting was done, and in light of these alleged irregularities.

A vote by the committee on the two judges and the other 15 up for retention in districts 2 and 3 found all the judges qualified.

James P. Connally, president of the Chicago Bar Assn., said judges' solicitations of support from attorneys would not have a beneficial effect on the Bar's decision.

Chicago mayoral race can teach educators

For suburbanites, the Chicago mayoral campaign has the same distant fascination as the power struggles in the Soviet Union have for those on the Washington, D.C., cocktail circuit — it may affect us someday, but now it's just fun to watch.

One issue that has come up in the Chicago campaign, however, is interesting in a less distant way. The increasing focus on the condition of the Chicago public schools as an issue may be a sign of things to come in all school systems.

There also is irony in the fact that many suburban Republicans who believe schools are, and should be, nonpolitical are likely to sympathize with Mayor Richard J. Daley, who has seemed perplexed by attacks on the condition of the schools.

THE REASON for Daley's confusion, I suspect, is that one of the rules of the political game for years has been that everything else is fair game, but education is nonpolitical.

The attitude goes back to the time when schools were considered the one institution that could help children surpass their parents. There was a time when education was not only a road to success, but the only road to success for many people. And parents generally were unable to criticize their children's education because they had less education than the teachers.

It was during that period that schools were handed over to professional educators and to school boards that were decidedly nonpolitical. Daley grew up and ran large city for years, never questioning that premise. Only a few weeks ago, he was proudly announcing that he appointed people to the Chicago school board even if they disagreed with him — and he seemed confused that he should account for what those board members did. After all, he didn't expect them to be political.

The changes that have perplexed Daley are not likely to stop at the Chicago city limits because they have something to do with the way people look at education and educators. As more college graduates end up out of work and as more people see that educators make mistakes (whether in introducing "new math" or in placing children who don't cal of suburban schools, just as they have become more upset about the city schools.

It's going to be hard for educators, who are unaccustomed to being criticized, and school board members, who always have considered themselves nonpolitical, to cope with this changing attitude toward schools.

But they should take a hard look at Chicago's mayoral election. It may mean more to them than they'd like to think.

speak English in classes for the "retarded"), schools increasingly are going to be criticized and the subject of "political" campaigns.

IN THE SUBURBS the issue of quality of schools has come up only sporadically, with occasional protests about low student test scores. One reason may be simply that suburban schools are not in the desperate shape the Chicago schools are.

That does not mean, however, that citizens aren't going to become more critical.

The similarities of honey and sugar

Is honey more beneficial to one's health than cane sugar? Does sugar have a tendency to cause gas to form? Which is more fattening to use?

There is a lot of nonsense around about sugar and honey. Neither have any great health benefits and neither are particularly harmful to anyone in good health, other than providing too many calories that can lead to obesity and its problems.

There are three single sugars. They are glucose, fructose and galactose. Ordinary table sugar, sucrose, is a double sugar and is made up by joining glucose and fructose together into a double sugar. Before it can be absorbed through the intestinal wall into your bloodstream, it must be broken down into the single sugars, glucose and fructose.

Honey contains glucose and fructose, too, but they are already separated into single sugars. This means they can be absorbed directly into the bloodstream without being broken apart.

Obviously, once the table sugar is broken into glucose and fructose, it is no different than the honey sugars of glucose and fructose. The only people, then, who benefit from using honey rather than table sugar are those who do not have the enzyme in the intestine to split the double sugar of cane or beet sugar into glucose and fructose single sugars. This is a fairly rare condition.

As you get older there is a loss of enzyme activity, and I wouldn't totally discount that honey may have less of a tendency to cause gas than sugar in later years. Both can be fermented to release gas.

Because honey is literally glucose and fructose diluted with water, it does contain fewer calories per gram or teaspoon than table sugar. Sugar is almost free of water. However, you could dilute the sugar with water and you are at the same level. In brief, it will take more honey to produce the same sweetness you are used to from table sugar.

Neither honey nor table sugar provide any significant amounts of vitamins, minerals or needed bulk for your diet.

Would you kindly advise me if you feel it is unwise, from a health standpoint, to put young children (ages 8 to 16) on a more or less vegetable diet with no meat except fish and chicken?

It won't hurt a bit as long as they get enough fish and chicken. The protein in fish and chicken is about the same as the protein you get in mammal meat. Any one, in sufficient quantity, is adequate to meet the body's protein needs, even for young growing children. Milk protein is also very good.

For most purposes you can pretty well exchange fish, chicken, and mammal meat with each other. The apparent advantage of fish and chicken is that both are lower in saturated fat than most mammal meat. This is believed by many scientists to be beneficial in preventing heart and vascular disease.

Springfield: cutting costs...

As we all know from our eighth grade civics classes, a function of the state Senate is to extend hearty congratulations to the Midlothian White Sox on winning their third Illinois amateur baseball championship in five years."

The Senate is then free to move on to more weighty matters, such as congratulating "the Eagles" of Bend Attendance Center of Bend, fourth place winner in the 1973 Illinois State Grade School Lightweight Basketball Tournament."

The cost of this vital function of government has been estimated at a mere quarter of a million dollars a year. That's the figure which Senate staff members gave to newly-elected Senate President Cecil Partee, D-Chicago, when he inquired about the expense of these frivolous Senate resolutions.

Actually, Partee's estimate is on the conservative side. Staff researchers estimated that each resolution passed costs approximately $700 in printing and binding costs, not including the time spent by $20,000-a-year senators in moving them through the Senate.

In the 78th General Assembly, the Senate passed 586 resolutions, at an estimated cost of $410,200. A portion of those are necessary measures dealing with rules of the Senate, proposed constitutional amendments and other matters of legitimate concern.

The rest are pap, introduced for no higher purpose than to give their sponsors a state document to be sent home to constituents for their own aggrandizement.

If the situation is bad in the Senate, it is horrendous in the House, where 1,301 resolutions were passed in the last General Assembly.

A good many of the resolutions passed by both the House and Senate are "memorials," or "death resolutions," praising recently deceased public and private citizens; birthday messages; anniversary wishes; and so on. Partee has suggested, instead, a "certificate of recognition," which could simply be filed with the clerk of the Senate and be made a part of the legislature's record without the cost of passing and recording a resolution.

Partee's proposal is an outstanding example of how state government can eliminate some of the wastes which have crept into its operation over several decades. It should be given overwhelming support in the Senate; and it should be copied quickly by the House.

Partee's estimate is on the conservative side. Staff researchers estimated that each resolution passed costs approximately $700 in printing and binding costs, not including the time spent by $20,000-a-year senators in moving them through the Senate.

...backing Walker plan

Gov. Daniel Walker's assessment of the "state of the State" before the Illinois legislature last week contained some commendable points which should be translated into action.

The governor was sketchy in outlining specifics, but many of the proposals which he advocated are worthy of the support of the legislature.

They included:

• A law to grant collective bargaining rights to public employees.

- No-fault auto insurance.
- Improvements in consumer protection, particularly for renters and owners of condominium housing units.
- Merit selection of judges.
- Ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

There are other points in the governor's message which deserve consideration, and we trust that he will expand on all his proposals in the near future.

Another feature of Walker's statement to the legislature was his conciliatory admission that he has made mistakes in the first two years of his administration.

The legislature should take that admission at face value, and consider his new program on its merits and not attack it as a weapon to avenge past grievances.

A lesson in handguns

The theory of the deadly nature of handguns was given a shot in the arm — or, more correctly, a shot in the finger and the foot — recently in Palatine.

The Fox Valley Arms Fellowship was presenting a gun show at Howard Johnson's Motor Inn, and a .25 caliber automatic pistol went off accidentally, wounding two visitors at the show.

We'll state the obvious: guns are deadly weapons, even in the hands of experienced collectors, and, despite the illogical reasoning of handguns' fiercest advocates, guns DO kill and maim people. This latest incident, though perhaps comical, underscores those two painful truths.

Bob Lahey's column

Suburbanites to aid Daley

by BOB LAHEY
Political Editor

On Tuesday, Feb. 25, 1975, the citizens of Chicago will decide, for all practical purposes, whether the legendary Richard J. Daley will retain his title of Boss for yet another four years.

For most suburban residents, the election of the mayor of Chicago holds no more real interest than it does for the ordinary resident of, say, Pittsburgh.

Funny thing is that the question of whether Boss Daley is reelected has some bearing on the lives of both those residents. For the guy in Buffalo Grove or Park Ridge, the expected reelection of Richard J. Daley means a reinforcement of Daley's position as political boss not only of Chicago, but of Cook County. The ways in which that affects the life of the ordinary taxpayer in the county, and indeed in the state of Illinois, are too complex to attack here.

For the guy in Pittsburgh, the reelection of Richard J. Daley means that quite possibly the Boss will have a loud voice in deciding who is going to be President of this country from 1977 through 1980.

Aside from those questions asked by "ordinary residents" of Pittsburgh or Buffalo Grove, however, there is a cadre of unknown numbers of suburban residents who will play a large part in Chicago's primary election Tuesday.

This weekend, and again on election day, goodly numbers of suburban dwellers will journey into the city to aid the cause of the reelection of Richard Daley.

Why should suburbanites interest themselves in the election of the mayor of Chicago? There are three primary reasons, and one secondary reason.

The primary reasons may be listed as:

1. Jobs; 2. Jobs; 3. Jobs.

The secondary reason may be listed as: 4. Insurance.

The fourth reason is one which "street-wise" Chicago politicos learn at their mothers' knees. You never know when you might need a friend.

Work for a winner today. Get a break when the cops bust you tomorrow.

Chicago's suburbs are infested with emigrants from the wards of Chicago who accept the things discussed above not only as respectable, but ideals to which one should aspire.

When the call goes out from the old neighborhoods — where the emigrants originated, which they frequently regret having left and which they would like to be restored to their former state — many of these emigrants respond.

So this weekend there will be numbers of suburban residents working door-to-door in the wards of Chicago for the perpetuation of the Mayor.

They will be working, in many instances, for a city they have loved, and which they regret having abandoned.

And they will be working as a force that is probably overlooked by the opponents of Richard J. Daley, who will be overwhelmingly renominated for his sixth term as mayor of Chicago next Tuesday.

Hits Vietnam 'fallacies'

Fence post letters to the editor

I read with dismay an article in the Feb. 13 issue of The Herald on the U.S. "hatred" of South Vietnam. The column, written by Tom Tieke of News-Enterprise Assn., contained many fallacies, and I would like to correct some of them here.

Mr. Tieke mentions the "segment of the American public" which "has come to dislike this Asian ally more than any of our enemies," and says that, "It is not just U. S. noninvolvement these anti-South Vietnam people covet . . . it is the complete destruction of South Vietnam as it is now constituted."

Looking at South Vietnam "as it is now constituted," it is easy to realize why many people do not support it, although there are no hopes for its "complete destruction." Just last week the Thieu regime closed five newspapers in the country claiming they were run by communists. More likely, these people were non-communist opposers of Thieu. The Thieu government holds the largest number of political prisoners in the world in some of the most inhumane prisons (again, these prisoners are mainly anti-Thieu, rather than communist). Demonstrations against Thieu are illegal, a case in point being the arrest of a group of Buddhist nuns a couple of weeks ago for rallying in opposition to Thieu. Elections in South Vietnam are a farce with the opposition candidates constantly harassed and badgered.

Another feature of Walker's statement to the legislature was his conciliatory admission that he has made mistakes in the first two years of his administration.

The legislature should take that admission at face value, and consider his new program on its merits and not attack it as a weapon to avenge past grievances.

At the end of his article, Mr. Tieke tells us that, "It is still a U. S. war . . . and hoping for a communist win will not make any of it right." In pursuing this line of "logic" Mr. Tieke fails to realize that there is a third alternative to the communist government in the north and the Thieu government in the south. The Paris Peace Agreements, which the U. S. signed as a promise to uphold them, recognize a second legitimate government within South Vietnam, the Provisional Revolutionary Government of South Vietnam (PRG). The PRG is supposed to be on an equal footing with Thieu's government as part of a coalition

If the U. S. would do its part to implement the Peace Agreements (which is mainly to refuse any more military aid to one faction of South Vietnam), the result could be spectacular. Maybe some day the Vietnamese people could live without the fear of being bombed every time they walk down the street or of being arrested every time they exercise the right of free speech.

This coalition does not include elements from North Vietnam and has as its task the "promotion of the two South Vietnamese parties' implementation of this Agreement, achievement of national reconciliation and concord and insurance of democratic liberties." These tasks have not been accomplished in part because of Gen. Thieu's refusal to recognize the PRG and the United States' continued support of Thieu.

Can malpractice crisis be ended?

of Medical Injury Compensation. The commission would handle malpractice claims on administrative rather than litigated basis. Such a commission would consist of at least two physicians with lay individuals. This plan has been proposed by the American Medical Assn., but has not yet been fully developed.

• Remedial legislation. Laws would be passed stating a doctor and hospital cannot be held accountable for every mistake and that a doctor cannot cure every ailment.

"We need establishment of nationally accepted and recognized side effects of certain medical procedures," said Dr. Stanley Zydlo, chief of emergency medical services at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights. "They could be drawn up by a group of physicians, lawyers and laymen."

• Reestablish the locality rule. This would mean no hospital or physician could be sued as long as they followed accepted medical standards of the local medical community. The way it stands now medical care must measure up to care given anywhere in the nation.

"We have to follow Mayo Clinic standards yet we don't have the equipment, the research facilities or the personnel the Mayo Clinic has," a local general surgeon said. "We're also expected to know what new development happened yesterday."

• Shorten the statute of limitations. Currently a person can sue for malpractice two years from the date of the incident or two years from discovery of the result of the malpractice. A minor has the right to sue for malpractice which occurred during childhood until he is 20.

Insurance companies say they cannot figure appropriate premiums because claims often are not filed until 10 or 15 years later.

• Eliminate a lawyer's contingency fee. "Have a set fee not based on settlement, but say so much per case," the surgeon said. "We don't charge a patient based on how much a certain medical procedure will benefit him. We charge a set rate."

• Make it easier for hospitals and doctors to file counter claims against those who file "nuisance" suits. Currently it is difficult for a doctor or hospital to sue for court costs if he wins a case unless he can prove the suit was filed with malicious intent.

• Keep using the court system. "There is no question, the court system is the best way," said Daniel Karlin, attorney who specializes in medical law. "All surveys say the idea of being liable is the greatest deterrent to medical negligence."

Whatever solution is reached to end the malpractice insurance controversy, Malcolm Todd, president of the AMA, says it must be fair to both patient and physician.

Dr. Herbert Natof, anesthesiologist in Arlington Heights, is one of many doctors who hopes a solution is reached soon.

"I'm frightened by all this," he said. "If I'm hit with a bill of $14,000 or $15,000, I couldn't take it. That worries me. Malpractice insurance is something over which I have no control. You cannot practice without it."

Country schools

Few left to recall past

by KATHY BOYCE
(First of two parts)

Some things in life are taken for granted. The past is one of them.

The super-highways, quadrohomes and shopping centers tend to make us forget that once there was nothing but a few farms and a dirt road. Most of what stood here 100 years ago has been torn down to make way for you and me.

But a handful of old memories linger where we can catch glimpses of them as we speed along. They're there behind the trees, telephone wires and new paint — the old country schoolhouses.

Only a few of those old buildings still stand today to tell the history of schools in the Northwest suburbs. And of these but two continue to be used as a school. Wood School in Palatine, built in 1914, is the only public school still in use and St. Peter Lutheran School in Schaumburg Township, erected in 1888, the only parochial school still holding classes.

OF THE OTHERS few persons would guess from looking at them that children once learned their ABC's within those walls. Some have been transformed and now are what their occupants call home. Some are used as offices or museums.

Jim Marx was watering the lawn in front of his house at 212 N. Douglas, Arlington Heights, a couple of summers ago when a group of bikers pedaled by and stopped. Like a tour guide the leader waved his arm toward the Marx residence and announced that on the left was one of the first schoolhouses in Arlington Heights.

Marx, who is associate principal of Sacred Heart of Mary High School in Rolling Meadows, called his real estate broker the next day and learned that it was true — he did own a schoolhouse, one built in 1856 or 1858, no one quite remembers.

Actually the Marx residence is the second school built in Arlington Heights, but it is the only one still standing in the village. Three others, built in 1849, 1870 and 1905, once stood at Miner Street and Evergreen Avenue. The Marx residence stood there, too, before it was moved and made into a home.

THE SIMPLE WHITE house sitting modestly among a clump of trees across from Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village was once School Dist. 61, one of four rural districts that consolidated into Elk Grove Township Dist. 59. It's the only one of the four rural schoolhouses still standing today.

Harvey Goeddeke, foreman in the street department of Elk Grove Village, recalls that when he graduated from the 8th grade there in 1940, there were three students in his class and a total of 21 or 22 in the entire school.

He remembers fondly spelling bees and skating on the pond behind the school. His father was a member of the school board and signed Harvey's 8th grade diploma. He didn't attend high school, the nearest being Arlington eight miles away and no bus service.

WITH A LITTLE imagination the passerby can see children still playing in the yard outside the red brick building at the top of the hill at 920 N. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

The building is one of two rural public schools remaining in Palatine Township. Formerly Wittenburg School, Rural Dist. 13, it's now the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Schwank. The other, Bradwell School, Dist. 17, was an apartment for several years before it was purchased and renovated. Walls and windows were remodeled and the old building given a new roof and new siding. The green and brown house now standing at 254 Bradwell hardly resembles the one-room school it once was.

One parochial school remains today in Palatine Township, the prized possession of a woman whose hobby is collecting antiques.

ST. JOHN'S Evangelical and Reformed Church School, built in 1852 at Algonquin and Roselle Roads, was converted in 1948 into a house. Marie Hard, deputy clerk for the village of Mount Prospect, bought the old place in the 1960s and moved it to 215 S. Brockway, Palatine. With the addition of a few rooms, remodeling and some new plumbing, it looks more like a modern suburban home than an old country school.

Almost every settlement in the early days had a Lutheran school as well as a public one. Most of the children walked to classes and when the weather was bad or crops needed to be harvested, the schools often closed.

Two of those old parochial schools in Schaumburg Township are still in use. In the area first settled by the English and named Sarah's Grove, later German immigrants brought with them their strong Lutheran faith. They built a school in 1847 and then used it as a meeting room for the congregation when they erected a second school in 1888. The 1847 school, still standing, is used today as a museum, while the second continues as a school.

OF THE FIVE rural public schools in Schaumburg Township, only one has withstood the rapid growth of the 20th century. It's Sarah's Grove School, now a real estate office at Schaumburg and Roselle Roads.

For many years parochial schools were better known in Mount Prospect than the public. As late as 1933 parochial school children outnumbered public school students. Of the early parochial schools only St. John's Lutheran, built in 1901 at what is now 1100 Linneman Rd., still stands today housing the Mount Prospect Historical Society.

If buildings could talk, Mount Prospect's first schoolhouse could tell the history of that village. The old building, built about 1895 before there was a Mount Prospect, has seen many aspects of community life. It was not only the first school in Dist. 57, it was the village's first library, the first nursery, the first community hall. Today it stands at 201 N. Wille St., used as an office for St. John's Episcopal Church.

ST. MARY'S SCHOOL in Buffalo Grove hired its first teacher in 1852 and classes were held in private homes until the School Sisters of St. Francis came to town in 1912 and a three-room school was built. The convent was housed on the second floor. Today the school is the church rectory.

Flare in pants can be removed but a struggle

Talk about being frustrated — you should have seen me shopping for a slacks suit. I don't like the flare in the pants legs and, at this point in the game, I simply wasn't able to find a thing without the flare. One has to compromise, of course. Bought a suit without too much of a flare, then went to work.

Turned the pants inside out to examine where the flare started. A ruler is a must with this because you have to start several inches ahead of where the flare starts. You begin with nothing and come straight down the seam, making sure the width is the same all the way down. All four seams have to be changed equally so the front and back lines remain the same.

This done, I made a plain hem, using the same width as the original. Success, it's beautiful. Now I say it was worth all the struggle. But darn the designers.

Dear Dorothy: Your "gang" might be interested in my recipe for orange-spiced tea. You need three large navel oranges, one eight-ounce package of good, loose tea leaves, one three-inch piece of stick cinnamon, broken, and two teaspoons of whole cloves. Peel rind from the oranges, making sure no white membrane is attached; cut into narrow strips, spread on a cookie sheet and warm in a slow (250-degree) oven for 10 minutes or until the rind is dry. Cool, break into small pieces and toss with loose tea and spices in a bowl. Cover bowl tightly and allow to stand in a dark, dry place at least one week. Prepare for hot tea, as usual. — Mrs. D. Ward

Dear Dorothy: Here's a trick to help gravy. Add some dry or semi-sweet wine to the drippings in the pan during the last half-hour or so of the roasting time of a turkey or chicken. The alcohol evaporates but the aroma left adds so much to the gravy flavor. — Joesel Monroe

Food dye fails to get FDA approval

by Monica Wilch Perin

continue in effect unless it is challenged in court here.

According to the chairman of the Illinois Independent Voters consumer committee, Ellis Levin, the seventh circuit court, which encompasses Cook County, had previously issued the same ruling as the Supreme Court's in three cases. Levin said the split on this issue had been about half and half, with as many judges ruling in favor of consumers as ruling this way.

LEVIN, WHOSE group has been active in lobbying for consumer rights in the area of utilities, said the Supreme Court decision will probably fall hardest on poor people, whose service utility companies most often cut without notice — or threaten to cut.

Studies of the dye, called amaranth, in other countries have also indicated it may cause cancer, reduce fertility and adversely affect unborn fetuses.

CONSUMERS LOST another round to the utility companies in a recent Supreme Court decision ruling that the companies don't have to give customers notice before cutting off service.

However, the ruling may not have any impact on Illinois consumers, at least not right away.

The decision settled a legal dispute as to whether utility companies are to be considered government agencies and therefore required to follow the due process guarantees of the Constitution in an action such as cutting off a customer's service.

The high court said utilities are not an agency of the government, even though regulated by the state, and therefore they do not violate due process when they cut off service without giving prior notice.

HOWEVER, according to a spokesman for the Illinois Commerce Commission, which regulates utilities in this state, the decision does not alter a standing order by the ICC requiring utility companies here to give eight days notice by mail before cutting off a customer's service.

The spokesman said that order would be upheld.

Floral lei a must for Hawaiian tourist

Ever fascinated by the art of making flower leis? We wanted first thing after stepping off the Royal Hawaiian flight 737 from Chicago to Honolulu on our mid-winter escape to join the crowd to get a lei.

We resisted the temptation to buy a beguiling lei in one of the airport shops ($3.95 to $10), knowing that we could find cheaper ones because a stewardess told us so.

Just outside Honolulu International Airport terminal, about a score foot's walk away, were the lei stands where easy-going Polynesian women strung their leis.

THESE LEI STANDS are little stalls, each with a sign saying "Bessie's" or "Dorothy's," all huddled together under a single shaker roof and the leis hung up for perusal like a giant, colorful Navajo blanket.

Tiny Tina sat working on plumeria (called frangipani outside of Hawaii). We watched her start and finish a lei in about seven minutes. (It goes faster when tourists don't waste her time asking questions.)

Some leis, like those made of tiny ilima blossoms, require hours of work stringing the thread through the center of each blossom.

"Window-less" shopping from one stall to the next, we found each collection was more beautiful than the last, and each Polynesian lei seller so charming we went away with several leis. And why not? We could bathe ourselves in beauty for a dollar or two.

HAWAIIANS USE bougainvillea, carnations, cigar flowers, crown flowers, gardenias, ginger, globe amaranth (purple clover blossoms) ixora, jade vine, lehua (the flower of the big island of Hawaii), mangrove, maile vine, mau-mau, vanda orchids, pikake, stephanotis, tuberose, plumeria and others to fashion their gorgeous leis, worn for a variety of occasions, such as greeting arriving or departing visitors to the Islands or to state functions, weddings, formal dances, parties, evenings out, etc. Almost everyone wears leis at one time or another in Hawaii. In fact, tourists feel naked without them.

For a total investment of $2 we walked away with a lei of tuberose, coleus leaf and cushion mums, another of vanda orchids, and yet another of plumeria, clover blossoms and maidenhair fern.

ALTHOUGH SOME leis are very intricate and would almost require a postgraduate course in lei-making, the average lei can be fashioned by nearly anyone planning a Hawaiian luau on their suburban patio.

by Mary B. Good

How to make a lei for your next Hawaiian party? Use fresh, durable blossoms, such as carnations with clover blossoms. Because the spicy carnation stands out about six inches from the shoulder when made up into a lei, it is one of the most glamorous of leis. You might also consider cushion mums with foliage (like magnolia or euonymus big leaf wintercreeper you pruned from the backyard).

A LONG DARNING needle or a strong, thin 12-inch wire with one end turned up tightly to hold the thread is used. (Needles may be purchased in variety stores or fishing tackle shops.) Number ten thread cut to about 50 inches plus 12 inches to tie the ends together may be used in the stringing method of making a lei. (Leis are also made by winding, sewing, braiding, and mounting, but let's stick to stringing.) Flowers are strung end to end. Carnation leis are kept fresh by sprinkling them with water and keeping them in the refrigerator between wearings.

Here's hoping this bit of floral fantasy, my gift to you from the Islands, will help lessen winter's chill. Aloha!

Former Palatine mat star gains position in national tourney

John Lonergan has qualified for the junior college national wrestling championships at Worthington, Minn. Feb. 27.

The former Palatine high school mat star, now wearing Mayfair Junior College colors, battled his way to a third place showing in the Region IV tourney at Waubonsie last weekend. The top three finishers at each weight class advance to the national showdown.

Lonergan, at 142 pounds, upped his season record to 20-6 by turning back a Sauk Valley entry for the second time in the tournament during the wrestleback finals. Earlier another freshman teammate, Jim Hanetho, had just missed a berth in the nationals.

Hanetho, at 126, finished fourth. He is also an ex-Pirate grappler.

Mayfair wound up with an eighth place finish in the team standings while Hanetho finished 13th among the 15 squads represented at the tournament, the junior college equivalent of the prep state finals gathering. Joliet emerged on top of a basically two-way battle for team laurels with Blackhawk.

John Lonergan

Lonergan opened with a 6-4 triumph over Ken Kent of Sauk Valley but was then trounced by Blackhawk's Brian McGinnis 7-0. In the wrestlebacks he stopped Jay Lomax of Danville 4-1 and then had to dispose of Kent for a second time, 3-0.

Hanetho missed a third place windup and a trip to Minnesota by a scant four seconds of riding time.

Looking for land? ‘See it, step on it’ before purchasing

by LEA TONKIN

Hunting for a tract of land for your dream house can be rewarding winter sport for the hardy individual.

But be prepared to tromp through the crusty snow in an open field in Arlington Heights or cheerfully take to the hinterlands of Lake and McHenry counties at the drop of a new property listing. And always remember: what you see may be all you get when it comes to utilities, sewer, water and other improvements.

"Buyers should check quite a few properties," says Randall Rathjen, administrative director of the Homefinders Institute of Real Estate in Palatine. The payoff for patience can be great, he said. Property purchasers may want to design their own house, or to buy the land as collateral for a construction loan.

"Generally the people who do this are in the construction trades because they can save money on labor costs," Rathjen said.

THE PITFALLS of buying vacant property should not be underestimated, he continued. Unimproved lots in the countryside may appear bargains in contrast to lots available in developed areas of the Northwest suburbs. But the cost of improvements may run several thousand dollars — which will be added to the overall home cost. Municipal or county zoning law may affect the type of construction permitted.

The buyer should sign a contract that specifies there are no restrictions of record that prohibit construction, Rathjen continued. Anything from poor soil conditions to restrictions by the previous owner of the property could hamper home-construction plans.

Decide how much you're willing to pay for property in advance, Rathjen said. If you're in the market for several acres, your top price will determine how far you'll have to look. The asking price of $12,000 to $20,000 an acre in the vicinity of Long Grove and Kildeer may compare with similar acreage priced at $5,000 or less farther from Chicago.

A down payment of 25 to 50 per cent may be required by the seller or financial institution where financing is obtained, Rathjen said.

BUYERS SHOULD be sure the closing contract is subject to favorable results of soil tests, approval of building permits and improvements, said John McKay Jr., of the McKay Nealis real estate firm in Arlington Heights and Des Plaines.

"I would advise people to go out and physically inspect property," he said. "Get involved. See it, step on it and take a look at the area. Then negotiate a contract subject to soil tests and other conditions."

Comparison shopping is the buyer's best bet, said Albert Gundelach, Gundelach and Associates appraisal firm in Arlington Heights. Property values can vary greatly from year to year, he said. "Try to find out what's available and compare it with other offerings," he said.

As a rule of thumb, the purchaser seeking residential property as an investment should look for a 15 per cent annual boost in value. The average is closer to 6 or 7 per cent, when taxes, interest and other factors are considered, he said. For example, a 50-foot lot in Arlington Heights would cost a minimum $150 a front foot if improvements, streets and curbs are installed. A similar lot with water and septic but no paved street would cost less.

the Northwest suburbs. "It's one of the finest areas outside the City of Chicago," he said.

Comparison of land sales is a good means of coming up with a fair price for vacant property, he said. The location and improvements must be considered, he said. For example, a 50-foot lot in Arlington Heights would cost a minimum $150 a front foot if improvements, streets and curbs are installed. A similar lot with water and septic but no paved street would cost less.

Building pace to pick up this year, some experts say

Slight gains in construction activity can be expected in 1975, several industry experts predicted at a recent economic-outlook forum in Chicago.

"We look a lot better as a state and as a metropolitan area than the rest of the U.S.," said William Grimm, Midwest regional manager for McGraw-Hill Co. "The demand for housing is still here." Although 1975 will not be a banner year for new construction, it will not be a disaster, Grimm said.

Grimm was one of several participants in a construction conference sponsored by the Chicago Assn. of Commerce and Industry. He predicts 50,000 new housing units will be built in Illinois this year. Housing activity in Illinois should gain momentum before the predicted national upturn in the fourth quarter of the year, he said.

Grimm said he hopes planned industrial and commercial projects will carry through the spring and summer months.

"I think we're going to have a very good year," he said.

"A VERY POOR year" for new housing construction is forecast by Aaron Sabghir of the construction projects division of the U.S. Dept. of Commerce. He predicts national housing starts of 1.4 million units and expenditures of $142-$144 billion.

The high price of housing and economic uncertainty will mean housing will be more closely tied to the general economy rather than assuming a lead role in a late 1975 upswing, he said.

Consumer uncertainty and declines in real income will offset decreased building material costs and expansion of mortgage credit, said Dennis Jacobs, assistant economist for the U.S. League of Savings Assns. He estimates 1.2 million housing starts in the United States this year.

John Coulter, director of economic research and statistics for the Chicago Assn. of Commerce and Industry, said "Chicago continues as a very strong housing area" in contrast to many other metropolitan areas. He predicts an increase in residential construction and a slight decline in non-residential construction this year in the Chicago metropolitan area. Construction costs rose at an 8 per cent rate in the Chicago area compared to a 14 per cent boost in the national average last year, he said.

Levitt donates 50 acres to Schaumburg

Levitt Residential Communities, Inc. recently donated a 50-acre site within its Sheffield Estates subdivision in Schaumburg for use as a recreational park.

As a continuing program of ecological conservation, Levitt also donated their former Strathmore subdivision sales office in Buffalo Grove to that village's park district for use as a combination museum and pre-school center, 10 acres to the Naperville park district from their Old Farm subdivision and 30 acres to Vernon Hills within their Deerpath subdivision.

"We tendered the Schaumburg site in recognition of the close association and high degree of cooperation that has existed between Schaumburg and Levitt during the past several years," Harry T. Sleek, director of community land planning, explained.

The site, which is now the largest park area in Schaumburg, contains a five-acre lake which will sustain fish life, a three-acre park for development of a football field and two baseball fields, a 14-acre picnic grove and miles of greenway throughout the entire area, Sleek outlined.

Originally, a portion of this parcel was to be maintained as a waterfowl sanctuary. However, Sleek emphasized, Levitt worked with the North Cook County Soil and Water Conservation District which recommended that "any development on this and adjoining sites should provide for the preservation of the wetland areas in a natural, undisturbed state."

"Levitt has accomplished this by integrating both a natural habitat for the owl and an attractive and useful parcel of land for residents of Sheffield Estates, Sheffield Park and all of Schaumburg," Paul Derda, director of parks and recreation for Schaumburg, stressed.

This area constitutes the largest park area within the district's realm, Derda noted. Completion of the football and baseball fields, as well as grading and seeding the area will be completed by November.

According to Sleek, the recreational facility when finished will be worth $14 million.

"Wetlands this large are unusual in the area now, and will become increasingly rare as development continues," Sleek commented. "By interlacing a recreational facility which serves the leisure activities of residents, we were able to maintain the vegetation and wildlife in the wetlands without disrupting their natural uses."

Levitt is building single-family homes around the natural setting. When completed, Sheffield Estates will contain 532 single-family homes as a gross density of three dwelling units per acre.

Located on 181 acres between Schaumburg and Bode Roads east of Barrington Road, 55 acres will be devoted to open space which includes the above recreational facility.

Five basic types of single-family houses are offered which feature several variations encompassing different exterior materials of cedar, masonry or (Continued on Page 8)

Outlook for solar heating of homes not that sunny

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Home heating by sunshine may be leaving the realm of science fiction, but a leading researcher says most Americans should hold onto their oil furnaces for a while.

"I expect a big explosion in solar heating in about a year in the relatively warm summer climates," Dr. William Shurcliff of Harvard said. "However, in the northern climates, especially where it gets very cold for sustained periods during January and February, the cost makes it prohibitive in the near future."

However, a State Dept. official says the government considers solar energy only a future possibility as a practical source of energy.

There are presently a little more than 100 buildings in the world heated by sunlight, Shurcliff said. He said his recent survey of more than 90 of them finds most were built using outdated methods.

The key to providing solar heating on a mass scale is making the initial expenditure above the cost of a furnace-heated home small enough that 10 years without heating bills would pay it off.

IT IS MORE practical in southern climates because of the absence of sustained periods of the cold, sunless days during which stored heat would have to warm the structure.

Solar heat is generated by storing water heated by the sun in a tank. The roof of the building is made of aluminum or galvanized steel painted black and covered by sheets of glass. The water is pumped between the glass and the metal, and runs into the tank, which is insulated to retain the heat.

Distribution of the heat is controlled by a thermostat through a radiator as in conventionally heated buildings.

The larger the size of the metal and glass covering, called the collector, the more heat able to be stored. Therefore, to heat a northern New England home, where prolonged periods of sub-zero temperatures and cloudy days are common during the winter, huge and extremely expensive collectors and storage tanks would be needed.

HOWEVER, SHURCLIFF did predict use of a partial solar heating program in northern climates. He said that houses already equipped with furnaces could use them during the cold months, while depending on solar heating the rest of the year.

"Financially, solar heating can save money," Shurcliff said, "but the real value is that you don't have to worry about the oil company — or the Arabs — telling you there isn't any oil. Unless you live in a place where it is always cloudy, in which case solar heating is impractical anyway, you don't have to worry about your source of energy."

Shurcliff points to a solar home built by Ron Shore of Snowmass, Colo. as a possible breakthrough in making solar heating possible on a mass scale.

He said previously most solar homes used thick aluminum with inside passages that carried the water. But that costs about $20 per square foot. Shore, he noted, has developed a collector that uses extremely thin metal available in hardware stores.

Shore said his solar heating system costs $3,000 to build, but that he had been saving $100 a month on heating bills. The only additional monthly cost, he said, is a $2 electric bill to power the water pump.

Free seminar tonight

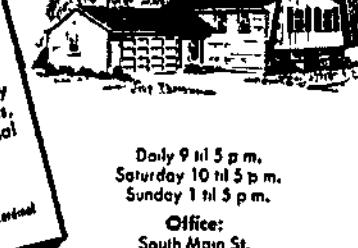

"Everything you wanted to know about buying a home but were afraid to ask" will be the topic of a free seminar sponsored by Venture Realty Company and hosted by Pat Carr. Guest speakers will include Louis Scherb, Attorney at Law, Carol Rucinski, Executive Mortgage Loan Officer of National Homes Acceptance Corporation, and Paul Koslak, Real Estate Manager and Planner.

The seminar was completely planned and executed by Ms. Carr. When asked why she went to the trouble, she replied, "In my short time in real estate, I was really surprised how few people took advantage of various government sponsored programs to assist in home buying. I hope our panel of speakers can shed some light and possibly help to unlock the front doors for many people." The seminar will be held tonight, Feb. 20 at 7 p.m. at the Clayton House Motel, adjacent to Milwaukee Airport, in Wheeling. Everyone interested may make a reservation by calling Ms. Carr at 298-2194.

Arlington Realty marks 25 years

Arlington Realty celebrated its 25th year of real estate service at a special anniversary luncheon at Arlington Park Hilton Hotel recently. Guests of honor were eight sales associates who were presented with pewter gifts in recognition of 1974 sales achievement.

Two associates who qualified for the $2 Million Dollar Club were Evelyn Hines and Lorraine Larsen, both of Arlington Heights. New Million Dollar Club members honored were Dorothy Jacobs, Arlington Heights, and Betty Kunzweiler, Palatine office. Four sales associates were inducted as charter members of the new Salesmasters Club. They are: Lillian Marshall, Stella Vellotti, and Ed Lighty, of Arlington Heights and Terry Lighty, Palatine office.

Herb Carl, Century 21 - Arlington Realty co-owner, acted as master-of-ceremonies for the business meeting and luncheon for 75 sales associates and guests. The program consisted of a nostalgic trip to 1950 and a look ahead to 1980 with Century 21's five-year plan. Entertainment was provided by the Arlington High School Chamber Choir.

Arlington Realty, founded in February, 1950, is owned by four veteran Northwest Suburban Realtors: Bill Kleiner, Herb Carl, Elmer Zien and Al Cinquini. The firm was founded by Eddie Levin, who was also honored at the affair and presented with a special anniversary cake. Levin, now retired, sold the firm in 1960 to the four present owners. The realty firm, now with four area offices, was one of the founding members of M.A.P. Multiple Listing Service and represents the M.A.P. area for Homeric, the nation's oldest and largest executive referral system for transferred families.

Arlington Realty joined the nationwide network of Century 21 in September, 1974. Century 21 was also founded in Feb-uary just three years ago and now has more than 1,000 offices in 23 states and Canada. There are 62 Century 21 offices in the Chicago area.

Herb Carl also announced the firm had just established a 25-year record with the highest sales volume for any January in history. Sales leaders for the month were: Irv Hecht (Hoffman-Schaumburg Office), Ed Joyce and Lillian Marshall (North Arlington office), Stella Vellotti (South Arlington office), and Nora Walther (Palatine area office).

The firm is now planning special events and contests to be held during the next 12 months to commemorate the 25th year of real estate service in the northwest suburban area.

Writing your rent check is just one of the pleasures waiting for you at Moon Lake Village.

Another one is living in your apartment. And relaxing the space, the comfort, the lush, wall to wall shag carpeting, the kitchen appliances.

Another is going outside. To your fresh, country atmosphere. To your private clubhouse. To your Olympic sized pool. To your tennis courts. To your playgrounds. To your well-stocked lake.

Another is knowing Woodfield Mall is just minutes away.

Century 21-Arlington Realty announces that four of its Palatine staff members are attending state classes in Peoria to earn the GRI degree for real estate sales through Feb. 22.

Terry Leighty and Betty Kunzweiler are attending their third and last session for the coveted GRI designation. Carol Grimm and Nora Walter are attending for the first time.

Courses taught during the session include real estate finance, appraising, real estate principals, marketing, construction law, advertising, trading, taxes, income and investment property analysis, land planning and development and various other topics.

Fifteen Gladstone staffers participate in RELO rally

Fifteen Gladstone, Realtors' associates took part in the RELO rally sponsored by the Chicago Metropolitan Area Committee of RELO/Inter-City Relocation Service Feb. 6 at the Marriott Hotel.

Representing the Gladstone offices were Ben Bziedzinski, Berwyn; Mary Ford and Harry Blume, Des Plaines; Dokis Arvanites and Morris Replogle, Elk Grove Village; Marian Faro, Franklin Park; Robert Dohn, Irene Dawson, Harold Blitenthal and Bill Small, Mount Prospect; Barbara Mills, Toni Hall and Jeanne George, Villa Park; and Bob Cassey, Westchester. Also attending was Linda Bass, Gladstone's Miss RELO, who coordinates the firm's transferee program from her headquarters in the Des Plaines office.

Gladstone's representatives were among several hundred Chicago area RELO members at the rally to study relocation techniques in community orientation and home finding for people transferring to or from Chicago and its suburbs. One of every 10 relocating families referred among the 726 RELO members each year is moving in or out of this area, former national president Paul Hanson reported.

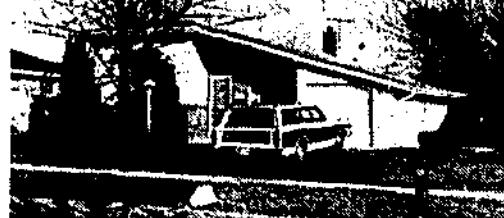

Realtor Wilford L. Brooks has joined Baird and Warner as a broker-salesman in their Des Plaines office.

Brooks recently closed Brooks Realty Co. which he founded in 1953. The office building, opposite the Cumberland Railroad Station on Northwest Hwy., had become a neighborhood landmark, and was one of the oldest real estate firms in the city under continuous ownership at the time of the closing.

In this year of Bicentennial celebrations, reminiscing and merry-making, it is only appropriate to highlight America's first commercial enterprise — the fishing industry. As early as the middle 1700's a thousand ships were fishing the waters off the New England Coast.

Today, countless vessels bring in catches from our coastal waters. They provide delectable, easy-to-prepare fish for dishes enjoyed by Americans living "from sea to shining sea."

In a day when economy is a constant concern in food budgets, fish provides nutritious dishes that have little waste, if any.

Whether you buy fresh, frozen or processed fish, this American Food Sampler will fit into your meal plans soon.

AMERICAN SEAFOOD SAMPLER

SPICY CRANBERRY DIP

1 can (1 lb.) whole berry cranberry sauce
 1/2 cup chili sauce
 1 tablespoon prepared horseradish
 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
 1 teaspoon dry mustard
 Frozen breaded shrimp

In a saucepan combine cranberry sauce, chili sauce, horseradish, lemon juice, and dry mustard. Heat mixture to boiling while stirring constantly. Serve hot as a dip for breaded shrimp prepared according to package directions. Makes about 2 cups dip.

TAMPICO TROUT

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
 1 clove garlic, crushed
 1/4 cup minced onion
 3 medium zucchini, diced (about 2 cups)
 2 tablespoons water
 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
 1 teaspoon coriander seeds, crushed
 1/2 teaspoon cumin seeds, crushed
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1/2 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
 1 package (8 oz.) cream cheese
 6 small, whole dressed, fresh or frozen, rainbow trout (thawed)
 Salt
 Pepper
 1 cup cornmeal
 1 tablespoon chili powder
 1/2 cup oil

In a saucepan saute garlic and onion in oil until tender. Add zucchini and water; cover and cook until tender, about 20 minutes. Puree zucchini in a blender. Add lemon juice, coriander and cumin seeds, salt and hot pepper sauce and blend in cream cheese until smooth. Return sauce to saucepan and keep warm while frying trout. Wash trout and season inside cavity with salt and pepper. Roll in cornmeal mixed with chili powder. Fry trout in a skillet, adding oil as needed, until golden brown and crisp, but do not overcook. Serve warm sauce over trout. Garnish with chopped tomato, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

SALMON IN ASPIC

4 medium, fresh or frozen, salmon steaks, 1-inch thick
 7 cups water
 3 slices onion, separated into rings
 1/2 cup fresh lemon juice
 1 celery leaf
 2 teaspoons mixed pickling spice
 1 bay leaf
 2 teaspoons salt
 1 tablespoon (1 envelope) unflavored gelatin
 1/4 cup cold water
 Hard-cooked egg white
 Ripe olives
 Whole pimiento
 Green pepper

Thaw salmon if frozen. In a deep skillet combine water, onion, lemon juice, celery leaf, pickling spice, bay leaf and salt and simmer 5 minutes. Add salmon steaks and poach 15-20 minutes or until done through. Remove steaks from skillet and drain on paper toweling. Reserve broth. Remove skin and bones from salmon steaks. Place salmon intact on serving platter. Strain broth from poaching and reserve 2 cups. Sprinkle gelatin over water to soften. Heat over low heat until gelatin is dissolved and stir into 2-cups reserved poaching broth. Chill gelatin until slightly thickened while decorating salmon steaks. Use cookie cutters to cut out shapes for flowers. Cut flowers out of hard-cooked egg white, using pimiento or ripe olives for centers. Cut thin strips of green pepper for stems. Brush salmon steaks with aspic and decorate with cut-outs. Pour a thin layer of gelatin in bottom of platter and chill to set. Brush a thin layer of gelatin over steaks and chill to set and repeat until steaks are well coated. If desired, jell extra aspic and cut into cubes and arrange around steaks. Garnish with fresh dill if desired. Makes 4 servings.

ESPAÑOLE FISH PIE

1 pound skinless, fresh or frozen, fish fillets
 1 package (11 oz.) pie crust mix
 Salt
 Pepper
 Olive oil
 1/4 cup minced onion
 1/2 teaspoon leaf oregano
 1/2 teaspoon basil leaves
 1 green pepper
 1 large tomato, thinly sliced
 Olive oil
 Salt
 Pepper
 1/2 cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Thaw fillets if frozen. Prepare pie crust mix according to package directions. Roll out on a lightly floured surface to 14-inch circle. Ease dough into a 12-inch round pizza pan and flute edges. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven 10 minutes and remove. Season fish fillets with salt and pepper and arrange on crust in baking pan. Brush fillets with olive oil. Sprinkle onion then oregano and basil over fillets. Cut green pepper rings and remove membrane and seeds. Arrange on fish and top with tomato slices. Lightly brush with olive oil and sprinkle with salt, pepper and Parmesan cheese. Bake 35-40 minutes longer at 400 degrees, until center is done. Cut into wedges to serve. Makes 6 servings.

SHRIMP STUFFED PEPPERS

1 1/2 pounds, fresh or frozen, peeled and deveined shrimp
 1 cup fresh bread crumbs
 1 cup minced celery
 1/4 cup minced onion
 3 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
 1 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
 1 teaspoon hot pepper sauce
 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
 1/2 teaspoon leaf thyme
 1 teaspoon salt
 6 medium green peppers

Boil shrimp. Reserve several shrimp for garnish and cut remaining shrimp in half lengthwise. In a bowl toss together shrimp, crumbs, celery, onion and eggs. In a small bowl make dressing by combining mayonnaise, Worcestershire sauce, hot pepper sauce, mustard, thyme and salt and stir dressing into shrimp mixture and set aside. Cut tops off 6 green peppers and remove seeds and membrane. Precook green pepper cups in boiling water about 5 minutes and drain. Sprinkle inside of cups lightly with salt. Spoon shrimp filling into green pepper cups. Stand up peppers in a baking pan, propping, if necessary. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven 20-25 minutes. Garnish with reserved whole shrimp. Makes 6 servings.

NO SMORGASBORD at the Wilson residence is complete without rice pudding for dessert. Mrs. Wilson slides the nourishing dish into the oven where a light custard rises to the top while the rice sinks to the bottom.

Let kids make their own party fare

Suz's having a slumber party. Johnny will be ten years old next week and wants to invite the boys in for a good time. And since you're mom, they expect you to provide the treats.

A simple, but original menu is in order. This one may be so simple, the kids could do the work themselves and leave you more time to do the chaperoning or just sit back and read a good book.

Start out with Hearty Stew served in mugs and crunchy, Toasty Cheese Bread. Add some crisp relishes. End up with a treat — Party Dessert Pizza. This pizza is basically a chocolate chip cookie recipe spread out on a pizza pan and sliced in wedges. The kids will think it's a real treat.

HEARTY STEW

1 pound ground beef
1 envelop (1 1/2 ounces) seasoning mix for sloppy joes
1 can (1 pound)
tomatoes
1 cup uncooked elbow macaroni

1 can (1 pound)
pork and beans
2 cups water

Cook ground beef in large sauce pan, stirring to crumble; pour off excess fat. Stir in contents of seasoning mix envelop, tomatoes, macaroni, pork and beans and water. Cover; simmer 15 minutes or until macaroni is tender. Yield: eight to ten servings.

TOASTY CHEESE BREAD

1/2 cup butter, softened
2 tablespoons yellow mustard
1 cup shredded mild cheddar or American cheese
1 loaf Italian bread

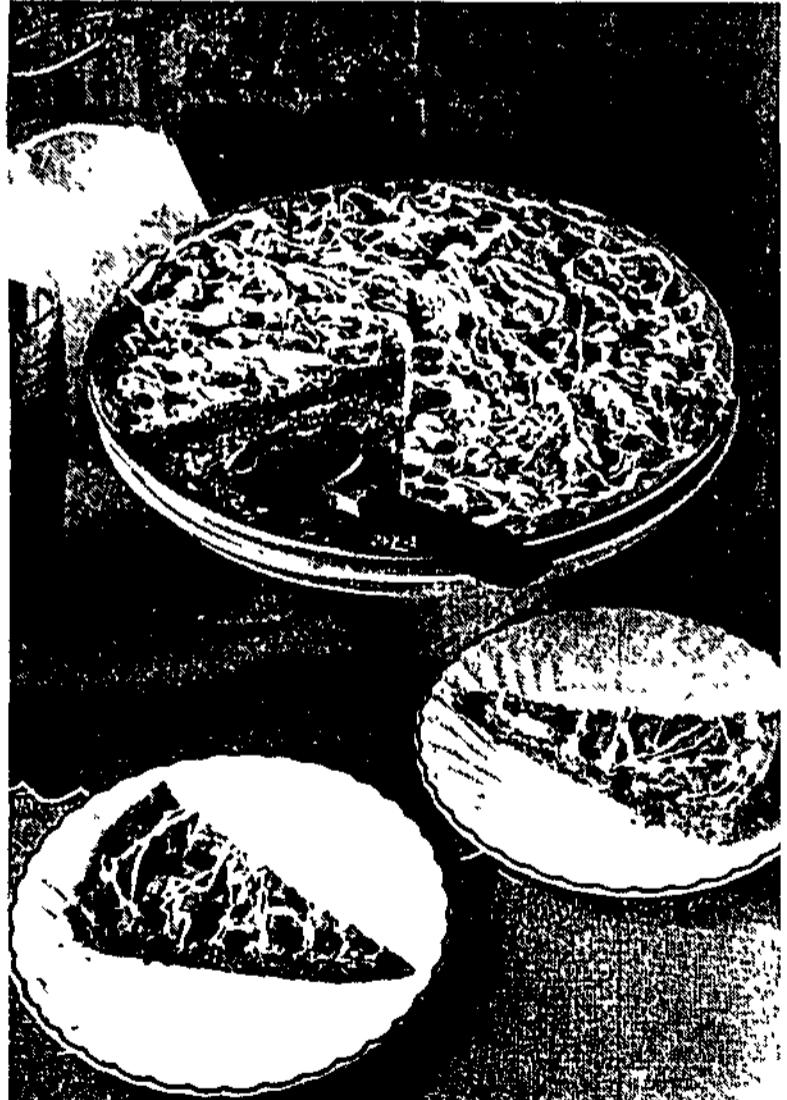

Combine butter, mustard and cheese. Split bread in half lengthwise; spread cut surface with cheese mixture. Cut into 2-inch sections. Toast under broiler until cheese melts. Yield: eight to ten servings.

PARTY DESSERT PIZZA

1 cup unsifted cake

Combine butter, mustard and cheese. Split bread in half lengthwise; spread cut surface with cheese mixture. Cut into 2-inch sections. Toast under broiler until cheese melts. Yield: eight to ten servings.

Place one cup sifted confectioners sugar in small bowl. Gradually blend in 1 tablespoon hot milk or water. Makes 1/3 cup.

Tops smorgasbord

Rice pudding her specialty

by LOIS SEILER

Although there's not a drop of Swedish blood in her background, Dorothy Wilson of Des Plaines loves smorgasbords and one of her specialties is a superb rice pudding, typical dish of this Swedish feast.

Made with a recipe she has been using for 20 years, the nourishing pudding contains six eggs and a quart of milk, along with rice, sugar, and a sprinkling of cinnamon and nutmeg. During the baking process, a light custard forms on the top, while the rice sinks to the bottom.

Dorothy recommends it for any meal from church potlucks to picnics, and for a buffet with almost any entree — ham, beef or chicken. Her smorgasbord menus often include a baked ham, Swedish meat balls, tuna mold, cheese platter with crackers, fancy gelatin molds and the essential rice pudding.

Her husband Vernon's favorite is an elegant party mold, which looks impressive on a buffet and tastes just as good as it looks. Made in a large ring mold, the top layer consists of a creamy mixture of cream cheese, Miracle Whip, whipped cream, fruit cocktail and chopped pecans with unflavored gelatin as the congealing agent. The bottom layer is a bright raspberry gelatin. When unmolded, Dorothy garnishes the platter with half slices of pineapple and serves the salad with a raspberry-whipped cream dressing.

THE WILSON' children, Darlene, Vernon and Debbie, choose a cherry torte as their favorite dessert. Easy to prepare, this one-bowl cake may be made one day and the topping the next. The batter contains sour cherries and walnuts, and is spiced with cinnamon.

Because the cake is moist, it will keep well and should be warmed before serving. Dorothy tops each piece with a dollop of whipped cream and a warm cherry sauce. The tart sauce is a nice contrast to the sweet cake.

Working as a bookkeeper for an accounting service doesn't deter Dorothy from cooking and baking. They are her favorite hobbies and she likes to entertain. Active in church work, Dorothy is a past district president of the Women's Missionary Prayer Fellowship and is a deaconess of the Des Plaines Christian and Missionary Alliance Church.

RICE PUDDING

6 beaten eggs
1 cup granulated sugar
2 1/2 cups cooked regular rice
Pinch of salt
4 cups milk
Cinnamon
Nutmeg

In a two-quart baking dish, beat eggs well; add sugar and blend thoroughly. Add rice, salt and milk; stir well. Sprinkle top with cinnamon and nutmeg.

Place baking dish in a pan of hot water and bake at 350 degrees for one hour or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Serves 10 for dinner, more for a smorgasbord.

Perk up winter vegetables with glaze

This is the time to take advantage of winter vegetables. Perk up any hot cooked vegetable with a curry sauce or whip up a glaze for apples or a mixture of apples and carrots and parsnips with a touch of inexpensive sweetness from corn syrup.

YAMS AND HAM IN RAISIN SAUCE

1 ham steak, 1-inch thick (about 1 1/2 pounds)
6 medium yams, cooked and quartered
1/3 cup dark seedless raisins
3/4 cup dark corn syrup
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
1/2 teaspoon grated lemon peel
2 tablespoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
In large skillet, quickly brown ham on both sides. Place in large shallow baking dish; arrange yams around ham. Combine remaining ingredients in skillet; heat until butter melts and pour mixture over ham and yams. Bake in 350 degree oven 20 to 30 minutes, brushing occasionally with sauce. Makes six servings.

CURRY SAUCE

1/4 cup mayonnaise
1/4 cup dairy sour cream
1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar
1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon curry powder
Mix together ingredients in small saucepan. Heat over low heat two to three minutes, stirring occasionally. Serve over hot cooked vegetables. Makes 2 1/2 cups sauce.

GLAZED VEGETABLES AND APPLES

1 pound carrots, peeled and sliced
1 pound parsnips peeled and sliced
3 medium apples, cored and sliced
1/3 cup light corn syrup
1/2 teaspoon grated orange rind
1/3 cup orange juice
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup margarine
Cook carrots and parsnips in lightly salted boiling water until almost tender. Place precooked carrots, parsnips and apples in 2-quart casserole or baking dish. Mix together corn syrup, orange rind and orange juice and salt. Pour over vegetables. Dot with margarine. Bake in 375 degree oven 25 to 30 minutes or until vegetables and apples are tender. Makes 6 servings. Peeled small white onions, cooked with carrots and parsnips, may be substituted for apples.

LEMON-LIME GLAZED YAMS

1 tablespoon cornstarch
1/4 cup water
1/4 cup light corn syrup
1/2 teaspoon grated lime peel
1/2 teaspoon grated lemon peel
2 tablespoons lime juice
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Dash salt
4 medium yams, cooked, peeled and halved
In small saucepan, blend cornstarch and water. Add corn syrup, peels, juices and salt. Cook, stirring constantly until sauce boils 1/2 minute. Place yams in baking dish; pour sauce over yams. Bake in 375-degree oven 15 minutes or until yams are heated through, turning yams once.

Nutrition value outweighs vegetable cost

by GAYNOR MADDOX

Prices of vegetables continue to go noticeably higher. That goes for those that are fresh, frozen and canned. Some of the reasons cited are higher costs for sugar, cans, fuel, transportation, labor, etc.

Fresh vegetables however, may be cheaper at times than frozen or canned, particularly for short periods when they are in good supply. Compare prices and then decide which to buy the day you shop. As a rule, root vegetables will be cheaper.

Root vegetables include carrots, potatoes, onions, celery, beets, rutabagas and turnips. Ray Seelig, the highly esteemed consultant in information of the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Assn., a non-profit outfit in Washington, D.C., comments on some root vegetables:

"RUTABAGAS from Canada have an amazing food value and give zip to the meal. Our grandparents used them constantly. They have no fat and only 35 calories per 3 1/2-ounce serving. Unlike other large vegetables, the very large size does not taste woody. You probably will find them a better buy than some of the more fancy vegetables."

"Turnips are high in iron, particularly their greens. Cook the greens separately — and not too long. The white turnip with the purple base is the most popular in America."

"Sweet potatoes, those with the soft, red flesh, are an amazing health value and a particularly delicious one. They are high in vitamin A and some C and iron. In some poor countries people live on sweet potatoes almost entirely."

"WHITE POTATOES are another health treasure. Their protein is of the top grade. People can almost thrive on a diet of potatoes, too," Seelig says.

He adds, "Incidentally, dehydrated prepared potatoes, either for mashed or other dishes, are actually cheaper than fresh potatoes. But the processing destroys many of the vitamins. Remember this planning a balanced meal."

"Carrots are a storehouse of vitamin A, the vitamin usually short in the American diet. One carrot provides 11,000 units of vitamin A whereas the RDA calls for only 5,000. Many people like to eat them raw. But don't eat too many that way. They are hard to digest cooked."

SEELING POINTS out that beets today are usually all canned. Celery has little nutritional value, but everyone enjoys its crackling sound and celery helps clean teeth and stimulates the gums. Leeks and shallots are of the onion family and great flavor enhancers. Onions almost everybody loves. Celery root, or celeriac, is a large root of the celery plant used as a vegetable in many European countries.

As to the prices of fresh vegetables in comparison with frozen and canned, Donald Kuryloski, chief of the vegetable branch of Agricultural Marketing Service of the Department of Agriculture, says:

"Most of the vegetables grown today are produced in highly specialized areas. They require much handling. Think of all the other factors that enter into getting them fresh to your table — protective packaging and bags, the fertilizer, the petroleum for trucks, and, of course, rising costs of labor. Take carrots, for example. The wrappers for each bunch of carrots cost almost as much as the carrots themselves. People want clean colorful carrots, but they must pay for them."

New way to use leftovers, plentiful supply of pears

BAKED PEAR HAM SALADS

Looking around for a different way to use leftover meat, especially ham? Combine diced cooked ham with cooked rice, pears, crunchy celery and green peppers and bake. This is a change of pace baked salad that certainly extends the food budget while making a filling dinner entree with pleasing texture and taste.

BAKED PEAR HAM SALADS

2 fresh ripe winter pears
1 cup diced celery
1/2 cup chopped green pepper
1/4 cup chopped green onions

2 cups cooked rice
2 cups diced cooked ham
1 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup prepared mustard
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon white pepper
Pear slices and parsley for garnish

Core and dice pears. Combine pears with celery, green pepper, onions, rice and ham. Blend mayonnaise, mustard, salt and pepper. Mix with pear salad mixture. Spoon into six individual casseroles. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Garnish with pear slices and parsley. Makes six servings.

Sampling Mexican cuisine

It's interesting to visit a restaurant which one feels is destined to make its mark. Just such a place is Tia Elena on Grant Street in Tucson, Ariz., operated by Mr. and Mrs. Jesus Corral.

Strictly Old Mexico in style. Tia Elena now combines two former homes which have been joined by an airy dining room with a large flowing fountain in the center. The fountain and decorations throughout are the work of Corral, who is sculptor-artist-master craftsman. Mrs. Corral supervises the food service.

The menu has all the popular Mexican dishes and on each table is a dish of the ever-present Red Chile sauce which must have been loaded with chile tepines — it was hot!

Since it was lunchtime, I settled for a chicken tostada. The tostada is a crisp fried tortilla now available in almost all stores in cans, packages, or frozen. For this dish crisp 12 in the oven.

PUT 1 tablespoon oil in a skillet and in it wilt 1 small chopped onion. Add 1 large peeled tomato (or 1 cup well-drained canned tomatoes) and cook gently a few minutes. Add 2 cups cubed cooked chicken. Jalapeno sauce (available also in stores in bottles or cans) to taste, and salt. Mix well. Cover each tostada with some of this filling. Arrange cooked cut green beans and shredded lettuce on top and garnish with wedges of avocado and thin slices of stuffed olives. As is true with most Mexican dishes, you add more sauce as you desire. Serves 6 to 12, depending upon appetites.

For dessert, I tried the Alemandrada, a traditional Mexican sweet. Soak 2 envelopes lopes plain gelatin in cold water, then set over hot water to liquefy. Cool, stirring occasionally until it reaches consistency of syrup.

Whip 9 egg whites until stiff (eggs should be at room temperature for best results). Now fold into the egg whites 1/4 cups sugar, a pinch of salt, 3 drops almond extract and the gelatin. Divide into three bowls and with vegetable coloring, make one bowl red, another green and leave the third as is. Pour in alternately colored layers into a loaf-shaped dish, making center layer white. Chill in refrigerator until firmly set, then slice like brick ice cream.

Over each serving put this custard sauce and top with toasted sliced almonds. For the sauce beat 6 egg yolks lightly, then add 1/4 cup sugar and 1/8 teaspoon salt. Gradually add 2 cups scalded milk. Put in top of double boiler and cook and stir over hot, but not boiling, water until mixture coats the stirring spoon, about 7 minutes. Add 1/4 teaspoon almond flavoring and chill. The recipe makes 12 to 18 servings, depending upon size of slices.

2 indicted in backdating of Nixon papers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Watergate grand jury Wednesday indicted an attorney and a document appraiser for their parts in backdating former President Richard M. Nixon's gift of vice presidential papers to the National Archives.

The Nixon's 1969 tax return showed the gift, valued at $567,000, was made March 27, 1969. Actually, the papers granting the gift were signed and notarized April 10, 1970 — well after Congress passed a law sharply cutting back tax benefits for gifts made after July 25, 1969.

The indictment named Los Angeles attorney Frank DeMarco Jr., 49, and Chicago appraiser Ralph G. Newman, 63.

Former White House deputy assistant Edward L. Morgan, who already has pleaded guilty for his part in backdating the gift, was named an unindicted co-conspirator. Morgan was sentenced in December to four months in prison and 20 months probation.

DeMARCO WAS charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States, making false statements to the Internal Revenue Service, and obstructing an inquiry of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

Frank DeMarco Jr.

Ralph G. Newman

Newman was charged with conspiracy to defraud, and with assisting in the preparation of a false document filed with a federal income-tax return.

The court said conviction for conspiracy to defraud and for making false statements to the IRS carry maximum penalties of five years and a $10,000 fine on each count; obstructing a congressional inquiry five years and $5,000; and assisting in preparing a false statement three years and $5,000.

IN A STATEMENT from his Los Angeles law office, DeMarco said he had a "strange feeling of relief" in knowing the matter was about to come to some form of final resolution.

"I have been living under a cloud of doubt for over a year ever since Mr. Nixon's tax troubles first came to light and I welcome the chance to vindicate myself," he said.

"I have done nothing wrong. I have conspired with no one, in my judgment. I have made some mistakes but they were neither intentional nor criminal."

After the IRS ruled against Nixon's deductions, he agreed to pay almost $500,000 in back taxes and interest penalties. He said his personal savings would be "virtually wiped out."

NIXON'S pre-presidential papers were moved to storage facilities under control of the General Services Administration March 26-27, 1969. But this act itself was not claimed to constitute the "gift," the indictment said, adding that DeMarco, Newman and Morgan took various parts in having a Nixon deed actually transferring the material to the government fraudulently backdated to March 27, 1969.

The IRS audit division began a reaudit of the Nixon tax returns Dec. 7, 1973, and continued into 1974. The GSA and the Joint congressional committee entered the investigation in 1974 at the request of Nixon.

The indictment said that during these investigations, "the conspirators would conceal and cause the concealment of various documents . . ." and "would destroy and cause the destruction of other such documents."

Ralph G. Newman, indicted Wednesday in the backdating of former President Richard M. Nixon's vice presidential papers, is a historian most noted for his dissertations on the life and times of Abraham Lincoln and his accounts of the Civil War.

Newman, president of the board of the Chicago Public Library and a private bookseller, served as appraiser for numerous American Presidents and was paid more than $12,000 for the work he did for Nixon.

The papers, Newman said later, were probably worth more than the $575,000 he said they were worth in 1970. He has estimated their revised worth at more than $1 million.

Newman, 63, attended four colleges and received doctor of letters and doctor of laws degrees. He is the founder of the Abraham Lincoln Book Shop Inc., Chicago, owner of the Americana House Publishing Co., and recipient of several awards for his literary work, including several books he authored or edited.

"possibly connect the taxpayer with the preparation of the return" — thus providing the basis for a fraud penalty against Nixon. The question became moot when President Ford pardoned Nixon Sept. 9 for all Watergate-related offenses.

WHIP denies plans for 'housecleaning'

by JOHN MAES

Wheeling Improvement Party (WHIP) candidates kicked off their 1975 campaign Wednesday night, saying they would make necessary changes in village administration but denied reports of a "housecleaning" if their slate is elected. "People in the village hall don't have anything to fear from WHIP as far as cleaning house from top to bottom," said Otto (Skip) Hedlund, a WHIP trustee candidate. He said, rather, the party would evaluate the efficiency and effectiveness of village employees to see if changes are needed.

The remarks came during the party's opening campaign meeting at Jack London Junior High School.

GILBERT MONOSON, also a WHIP candidate for trustee, said, "We have some very, very capable, competent and fine people working in the village in many areas — there'll be no firings if they're (village employees) doing their jobs and doing them well."

The discussion was triggered when one of the party supporters said he had heard some residents remark that WHIP candidates would fire Village Mgr. George Passolt if they were elected.

But Monoson said that was an "unfounded fear probably passed by our opposition."

Two other slates are opposing WHIP in the April 15 election. One is the Wheeling Community Party (COM-PAR), consisting of William Rogers and incumbent trustees John Koepken, Edward Berger and Albert Lang.

Another group, the Wheeling Representative Party (WRP), consists of candidates Neil H. Brant, Kenneth R. Brady, Roger Powers and Robert E. Clark. On the WHIP ticket, candidates Charles Kerr and John Cole are running with Hedlund and Monoson.

AT THE WEDNESDAY session, Cole said a WHIP board would evaluate job performances of village employees but said it would take time to examine records and "see the day-to-day operation."

Kerr said it would be a matter of "good personnel management if someone were fired because he wasn't doing his job."

"Jobs have to be evaluated along with everything else," Monoson said.

State members also said they would be anxious to see the results of a village management study being conducted by a consultant.

BUT MONOSON said he wondered about the credibility of the study because the consultant is working with Passolt and said the manager may have set a "lot of the ground rules for the study."

"I don't think it will be as direct as we would like it to be — I'm less than confident in its ultimate work," he said.

Hedlund said the study would be worthwhile only if village management is being looked into "with detail."

After the session, Hedlund said the report is due before the village board in a few weeks.

Solutions don't come easily, but proposals abound...

by KAREN BLECHIA
Last of a series

If some doctors have their way, an arbitration board would decide how much money you could collect for medical malpractice.

If lawyers have their way, filing a lawsuit still would be the way to get compensation.

Arbitration and continued use of the courts are only two solutions proposed to the crisis caused by the rapid rise in medical malpractice suits and the high cost of malpractice insurance. Proposals include:

• Voluntary or mandatory arbitration. A patient would sign an agreement to submit any malpractice claims to arbitration rather than court. A board of doctors, attorneys and laymen would hear charges and make judgments. Some proposals include setting a $200,000 limit on awards. Some set specific damages which would be awarded each injury.

The Illinois Hospital Assn. and Illinois State Medical Society favor trying out

such a plan that they believe would speed handling of claims and possibly save money. The Chicago and Illinois Bar Associations oppose it because they do not think a patient would get as good a deal before a panel of arbitrators as they would in court.

• No-fault insurance. Physicians or patients would buy insurance under which aggrieved patients could collect for malpractice, based on an injury-damages schedule, without trial and without large lawyers' fees.

Opponents, including insurance companies, say there is no way to define what would be compensable injury under no-fault. Doctors believe the compensation should include medical expenses and loss of wages but none for pain and suffering because they say it is impossible to evaluate.

Proponents say local medical societies could define the injuries they would pay for.

• Establishment of state Commissions

Filing suit against a doctor or hospital is not the only way to get results on a medical complaint.

Four hospitals in the Northwest suburbs have patient-relations programs to take care of gripes. People with complaints about their doctors can go to the Chicago Medical Society or the Illinois Dept. of Education and Registration.

"We would prefer that patients come to us before going to court," said Brother Felix Bettendorf, president-chief executive officer at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village. He said patients with complaints can report them to the administration or to the medical director of the hospital.

AT HOLY FAMILY Hospital in Des Plaines, a patient with a complaint can take it to the nurse-in-charge or to one of the nuns assigned to patient relations. If a patient cannot get satisfaction, he can take his complaint to administration.

"If a patient falls or is injured in the hospital he would receive medical care and an X-ray to determine the extent of injury at no charge," said Jim McQuaid, hospital spokesman.

McQuaid and Ann Finney, in charge of patient relations at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, suggest patients with complaints about their doctors talk it over with the doctor first. Mrs. Finney said a patient can file a written complaint with the hospital medical staff.

GREIVANCES ABOUT physicians are investigated by the Chicago Medical Society, which tries to act as mediator between patient and physician, said Lee Forres, assistant to the executive administrator.

"We do not have any power or authority over doctors," he said. "But about 75 per cent of the time our mediation works."

If a patient with a serious complaint cannot get action, he can take his grievance to the Dept. of Education and Registration, which licenses doctors in Illinois.

On a formal complaint, a hearing would be held before the medical-licensing committee, which has the power to revoke a doctor's license.

Senate suspends tax on oil; veto vowed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted Wednesday to suspend the administration's tax on imported oil in a power showdown which apparently killed a key provision of President Ford's energy program.

Ford said immediately he would veto the bill. But administration forces conceded, in advance, there was no hope to sustain the veto in the House and the 66-28 margin by which the Senate approved the suspension appeared to have doomed Ford's hopes of salvaging the tax.

"I regret today's vote by the Senate but do not regard it as final," Ford said in a statement. "I intend to veto this legislation."

"I believe the Congress will ultimately respond to the will of the American people and serve national rather than narrow interests. I will continue to work with Congress to this end."

"I intend to veto this legislation. I could not do otherwise and be faithful to my oath of office."

Democrats and Republicans agreed that the Senate vote on overriding the veto would be close.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said before the vote, "If we can muster 30 votes today, then there is a good chance the President's veto can be sustained."

But the administration fell two votes short and there appeared to be virtually no chance to switch the votes needed to sustain the veto.

The Senate approved the suspension, passed earlier by the House, after rejecting Republican moves to allow some of the tax to remain in effect.

By executive order, Ford imposed a $1 a barrel tax on imported oil Feb. 1 which would climb to $3 a barrel April 1.

The three-tier tax was imposed in an effort to drive down consumption of oil products, especially gasoline.

In other economic matters:

Americans earned less money in January, the government said Wednesday, and Chrysler Corp.'s shareholders were told they would not get a dividend for the first time since the Great Depression.

In Washington, Henry Ford II, chairman of Ford Motor Co., and Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Auto Workers, warned of even harder times ahead.

• The Commerce Department reported that American wage earners' pay decreased in January for the third consecutive month and farmers' income dropped for the fourth month in a row.

At the same time, total personal income, including wages, retirement and welfare benefits, interest payments, and rent, rose an unusually low 0.2 per cent. In December, overall personal income was up 0.5 per cent.

The administration is counting on an increase in personal incomes to encourage consumer spending to help spur the economy.

• In New York, Chrysler's board of directors omitted paying a regular quarterly dividend for the first time since 1933. Earlier, General Motors reduced its dividend to 60 cents from 85 cents, and American Motors omitted paying. Ford has not yet reported its earnings or its dividend plans.

"In my 30 years as a businessman, I have never before felt so uncertain and so troubled about the future of both my country and my company," Henry Ford told Congress' Joint Economic Committee.

Woodcock, who also appeared before the committee, said Ford urged government turn its attention to reducing manufacturing unemployment. More than 200,000 autoworkers have been laid off indefinitely in the recession.

Woodcock, calling President Ford's economic-energy package "tardy and inadequate," said unemployment may rise to 9 or 10 per cent unless something is done immediately.

Also in the news Wednesday:

• The House Ways and Means Committee gave final approval to a $21.3 billion measure to rebate up to $200 to every taxpayer this year and further cut taxes in 1976. But when committee members again turned back liberal efforts to attach an amendment ending the oil depletion allowance, it meant that a fight over the loophole could delay House action on the tax cut bill.

• News that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger returned with some new

Middle East peace proposals sparked a late rally on the New York Stock Exchange. The Dow Jones average finished up 5.09 points at 736.39. Standard & Poor's index increased 0.51 to 81.44. The average price of an NYSE common share increased by 14 cents. Declines edged advances, 711 to 687, among the 1,808 issues traded.

• The Federal Reserve in New York has poured billions of dollars into the economy in recent months to fight recession, but the nation's money supply actually has declined, according to government figures. The supply fell 0.6 per cent in the last three months because consumers and businesses are saving instead of spending, the Fed says.

Rocky: face it, we're in tough times

unaware of all it is doing — has led to a growing sense of frustration among Americans.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller warned Wednesday there is no quick cure for the nation's economic ailments, even if Congress acts quickly on President Ford's program.

Speaking in the morning to business men and later to the nation's governors, Rockefeller said the nation must go through a period of belt tightening, and Congress must overhaul many costly programs before the economy can be turned around.

"Face it, we're in tough times," Rockefeller said. "It's going to take time, it's not going to happen overnight."

"For too long Congress has been passing legislation with wonderful objectives without realizing the long term implications," he said. He added that even if Congress acted quickly on Ford's economic program, or adopted one of its own, it would not bring a rapid end to inflation, recession and unemployment.

Later he told the National Governors Conference that big, costly, overlapping government — unaware of all it is doing — has led to a growing sense of frustration among Americans.

One of the reasons he resigned as governor of New York State last year, Rockefeller said, was that "less and less was I able to be responsive to my own constituency both in terms of decision-making and the operations of government."

Kissinger reports peace progress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, returning from a 10-day Middle East mission, said Wednesday he had made progress toward a "framework" for peace and promised close contact with the Soviet Union as negotiations continue.

Before reporting the results of his shuttle diplomacy to President Ford, Kissinger said, "I believe we have made some progress towards establishing a framework for negotiations in the Middle East and I plan to return there in a few

And he told reporters at the airport, "We will stay in close contact with the Soviet leaders as we negotiate another step in the Middle East and also in the preparation of a final settlement" of differences between Israel and the Arab nations.

Kissinger also planned to report good progress toward a common strategy on energy with America's major European allies including France, his last stop on a nine-nation mission which took him 15,335 miles in 10 days.

A senior official aboard Kissinger's plane said the secretary had been in almost daily contact with the principal Middle East leaders ever since leaving the area on Saturday. The official said Kissinger's exploratory mission "pretty well clarified the range" in which an agreement must be found on a further withdrawal east of the Suez Canal.

ERA rejected in Nevada

The Nevada state Senate rejected the Equal Rights Amendment Wednesday, making Nevada the fourth state this year to vote against the proposal banning sex discrimination through the U.S. Constitution. The vote was 12 to 8. Two of the three women senators opposed it, and other opponents were not swayed by Gov. Mike O'Callaghan's intervention. Utah, Georgia and Oklahoma previously rejected the amendment.

House votes funds to Penn Central

The House Wednesday voted $347 million in grants and loan guarantees to Penn Central and other bankrupt eastern railroads. Most of it would prevent shutdown of the nation's largest railroad at the end of this month. House Commerce Committee chairman Harley Staggers said there was a good possibility the Senate would accept the House bill. The Senate earlier approved a $275 million railroad package.

Dr. Edelin back on the job

Dr. Kenneth C. Edelin was called back to work to deliver a baby Wednesday, less than 24 hours after being spared a jail sentence for a manslaughter conviction in the death of an aborted fetus. Edelin, chief of ambulatory services in the obstetrics and gynecology department, was greeted at the hospital with cheers and a "Welcome Back, Ken — Doctor Edelin" banner from his colleagues.

Rebel rocket narrowly misses U.S. jet

A rebel rocket narrowly missed a U.S. jet transport ferrying supplies in a stepped up American airlift to Phnom Penh Wednesday, exploding about 50 yards away and killing five Cambodians and wounding six, military officers said. The missile was one of four fired at the Pocheontong airfield during the afternoon as heavy fighting continued near Phnom Penh. Cambodian officials and U.S. military sources in Bangkok revealed the increased American airlift has tripled the amount of food and ammunition being flown to the besieged Cambodian capital.

New Zealand volcano erupts

New Zealand's largest active volcano, Mount Ngauruhoe, erupted unexpectedly Wednesday, tossing 30-foot boulders into the air like marbles and showering ash onto towns up to 20 miles away. There were no reports of injuries but two Australian tourists trapped on the mountainside when the eruptions began said they narrowly escaped death as they zig-zagged down around the falling rocks. Residents of nearby towns were prepared to evacuate if ashes contaminated their water.

E. Canada air traffic at a trickle

Air traffic in eastern Canada was virtually halted Wednesday and postal service in Toronto slowed to a trickle in the third day of a federal blue collar workers' strike. Negotiations to end the strike resumed in Ottawa with federal mediator Tom O'Connor. Both sides agreed to a 48-hour news blackout on the talks, the first since the strike began Monday.

U.S. evacuating Americans from Asmara

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — The United States is evacuating the last of its nationals from the Eritrean capital of Asmara, fearing the situation may deteriorate further and lead to reprisals against Americans, diplomatic sources said Wednesday.

The sources said small groups of Americans have been evacuated from civil war-torn provincial capital in northern Ethiopia in the past week until now there are "less than 30 Americans left in the city."

These are mainly consular officials with a scattering of businessmen and Department of defense contract workers. When fighting broke out in Asmara Jan. 31 there were more than 300 Americans and their dependents living in the Eritrean capital.

More clashes were reported inside Asmara during the day, following heavy attacks by rebel infiltrators against government installations during the night. Diplomatic sources said the guerrillas had inflicted heavy casualties on a 500-man convoy of government regulars north of the city.

The decision to evacuate virtually all the Americans was taken because Washington feared the fighting between Eritrean secessionist rebels and government troops would escalate and Americans and this may be decided this weekend at a special meeting in Washington — the remaining Americans in Asmara could become the revenge targets of the rebels who are able to infiltrate the city at will.

According to sources here the Americans have left only a "few watchmen" at a formerly important communications station in Asmara and other installations and have evacuated the rest of the technicians.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House established a special committee Wednesday to investigate all government intelligence agencies, including the CIA.

On a 286-120 vote, the House established a Select Committee on Intelligence to be composed of seven Democrats and three Republicans, disregarding GOP charges the committee membership was stacked against them.

Earlier, the House defeated by a 255-141 vote an amendment by Rep. John B. Anderson, R-Ill., that would have provided equal party representation.

The Democrats also refused a last-minute appeal by Rep. Mildred Fenwick, R-N.Y., for Speaker Carl Albert to appoint four Republicans instead of three. She contended the move "would convince the people of the nation that we can rise above party, that we are seeking the truth."

The committee's composition as finally adopted almost exactly reflected the party division in the House as a whole.

Earlier, House Republicans had charged the Democrats with trying to create "a stacked deck" aimed at limiting the investigation only to intelligence operations under the Nixon administration.

"We don't want a stacked deck," said Rep. Barber B. Conable, R-N.Y., chairman of the Republican Policy Committee. He said the scope of the investigation should extend back to at least the Johnson administration.

The measure in its final form set no limits on how far back the committee may probe, but neither did it stipulate how far back its investigations must go.

Albert promptly appointed Rep. Lucien N. Nedzi, D-Mich., chairman of the committee — the third special panel named in recent weeks to investigate the CIA.

Schaumburg bank dealings with 2nd troubled firm told

by PAT GERLACH

A second case of questionable financial dealings between the Schaumburg State Bank and a company that received bank loans while heading into financial difficulties has come to light.

The four loans, totaling $25,500, were made in 1972 and 1973 to Hedges Manufacturing Co., Forest Park. Three of the loans came at a time when the bank controlled the company as trustee of a trust formed by the firm's late owner.

The fourth was made after the trust sold its stock in the company and bank officials acknowledged in court documents that Hedges was in serious financial trouble, court records show.

Operations of the company by the bank led to charges of mismanagement in a lawsuit filed by beneficiaries of the trust. Settlement of the suit has cost bank stockholders more than $163,000, reducing the bank's 1974 net income by 60 percent, the annual report of the bank has disclosed.

ONE OF THE ORIGINAL defendants

Ward Weaver

In the suit was Ward Weaver, then president of the bank, who joined the Hedges board of directors after the bank as trustee took control of the company.

Weaver's purchase of a Schaumburg business that had gone heavily into debt at the bank came under scrutiny of a federal grand jury in 1973. The company, Suburban Aquatics Inc., later went bankrupt. No action was taken by the grand jury and Weaver denied any wrongdoing.

The Hedges stock was included in the estate of Alice Blide, company president who died in 1970. Beneficiaries of the Schaumburg State Bank trust, which held 99 percent of the stock, were Mrs. Blide's daughters, Nancy Janzen of Chicago and Bonnie Ellis of Battle Creek, Mich.

The remaining five percent of the stock was owned by their cousin, Harry Hedberg of North Riverside, who was vice president of the company.

Weaver and William Kaiser Jr., a bank director and executor of Mrs. Blide's estate, were appointed to the Hedges board of directors after Mrs. Blide's death "in order to find out what was going on and to represent the bank's interest," Weaver said in a recent interview.

BY 1972, THE company was in financial difficulty. The bank made loans to Hedges in January and in August, court records show. In September the sisters filed suit against the bank, charging that bank officials mismanaged the company.

They asked $200,000 damages, charging that losses for 1972 were in excess of $100,000 and represented more than 50 percent of the company's net worth. They charged this was the company's first loss since its founding in 1949.

Also named as defendants in the suit were Kaiser and Weaver, although Weaver was later dropped from the case through an agreement between the plaintiffs and defendants.

Records indicate that Kaiser, in turn, later filed suit against Hedberg, charging he diverted business from the company through unfair business practices. Hedberg has since opened an office equipment manufacturing company in Broadview.

THE BANK MADE another loan to Hedges in November. In January 1973 it was given court permission to sell the trust's Hedges stock after bank officials filed the court that Hedges "has been steadily losing money and is without sufficient working capital to continue to meet its payroll and obligations."

The sale was made to Richard Moellering, 355 S Lincoln Ln., Arlington Heights. The sisters later charged that the bank officials unloaded the stock to Moellering for $70,000, less than the $203,000 value put on the stock by the Internal Revenue Service after Mrs. Blide's death.

Court records show a fourth Schaumburg State Bank loan to Hedges in March 1973.

In July, Moellering filed for reorganization of the company under federal bankruptcy statutes. The company listed assets of $297,000 and liabilities of $334,000. Schaumburg State Bank is among the firm's major creditors, with most of its $25,000 in loans still due.

Moellering has declined to comment about the company, which has been moved to Woodstock, Ill.

WEAVER, found innocent last year of federal charges of conspiracy and bank fraud, is no longer an officer or director of the bank. He said he is a real estate consultant to Brandel Enterprises, owned by Paul W. Brandel, president of Schaumburg State Bank.

Weaver refused to discuss the bank loans to Hedges, explaining "that's bank business and, as such, confidential."

He said the bank agreed to an out-of-court settlement in December 1974 "because the legal fees were getting so high," but added that throughout most of the two years of litigation, "we thought we had a good chance to win the suit."

Weaver had been indicted by a federal grand jury in May 1972 on charges of making false entries in bank records. He was found innocent of all charges during a trial last year.

LeMOINE STITT, an Arlington Heights attorney who represented the bank in the suit, said some of the money obtained through the loans was used by Hedges as working capital.

"I wouldn't say the bank was lending money to itself, though, because the corporation is distinctly separate from the trust," Stitt said, adding that the loans were approved by the bank's loan committee.

Stitt said there is no similarity between the Hedges situation and that of Suburban Aquatics, a wholesale tropical fish firm that accumulated substantial debts at Schaumburg State Bank and was then purchased by Weaver.

At a time when the company owed the bank about $16,000, Weaver bought the firm for $7,000 but the check was immediately turned back to the bank as payment for some of the debts.

Weaver later took in several partners, one of whom eventually took over sole ownership of Suburban Aquatics because he objected to the company's mounting debts. The company filed for bankruptcy in October 1973. The bank was not listed among its creditors.

THE PROPER boxing gear may look awkward on a youngster this size, but it is part of the training offered through the Mount Prospect Park District.

Who said boxing is a dying sport?

There were no winners and no losers Saturday when 20 young boxers met to show off their pugilistic skills in the basement of the Lions Park Recreation Center.

The matches, designed to allow parents to see their children's progress, were primarily sparring. The boxing show was the end product of several weeks of work through the Mount Prospect Park District boxing program, which is the brainchild of Farouk Hassan, a former professional boxer.

The program began about a year ago when Hassan approached a park board member about starting a boxing program. Hassan worked with the park district's Greg Repede to develop the program which has attracted about 25 to 30 boys for each 10-week session.

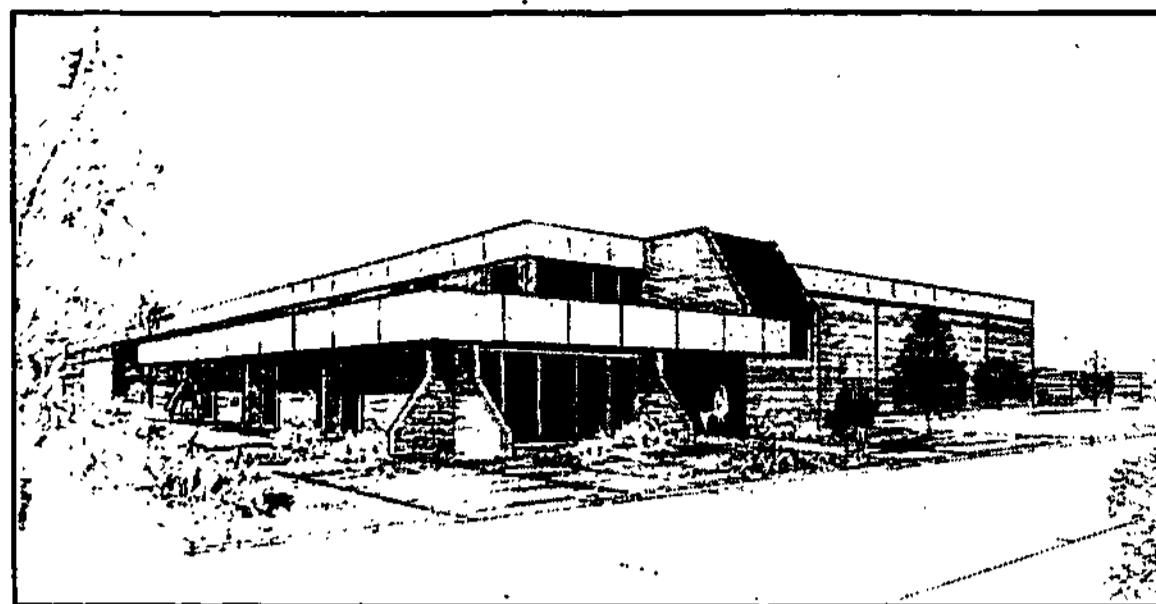

Repede said the park district was probably the first in the area to begin a boxing program. He said he looked for other programs where he needed information on starting a boxing program, but couldn't find any. "Mr. Hassan hadn't taught the program before so he wasn't real sure what he needed or how it would work," Repede said.

MORE RECENTLY, Repede said he has noticed that other park districts are beginning to offer boxing programs. "I've seen a couple in brochures more recently," he said.

Hassan, who was a Golden Gloves winner in Detroit, uses two assistants to help coach youngsters 10 years and older. While the entire group works out together, the youngsters are divided according to age and ability.

One of the assistants, Jerry Lee, also provided the park district with its first boxing ring. Lee constructed the ring himself and donated it to the park district. The ring can be put up and taken down for other activities in the basement.

Repede said the boxing program is an experiment that has been successful. "They enjoy it," he said of those who participate in the program. "We have a number of kids who have been with it the whole time."

EXPECTED TO be completed in early 1976, the Buffalo Grove public works building will face Lake-Cook Road just across from the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd. The building is costing some $570,000.

Completion expected in year

Buffalo Grove seeks bids for garage

Buffalo Grove officials are seeking construction bids for a new public works garage and hope the long-delayed building can be completed within a year.

The village board Tuesday decided to begin the bidding after reviewing a zoning board of appeals recommendation for a special use on the 4-acre site for the facility across from the village hall, 50 Raupp Blvd.

Village Mgr. Daniel Larson said officials want to move construction along as quickly as possible so the garage can be in service by next January.

Officials said Tuesday they also hope construction crews can have the facility "under roof" by November so work will not be delayed by winter weather later this year.

THE VILLAGE is paying close to $370,000 for the facility, almost entirely with federal revenue-sharing funds.

Earlier this year cost projections were set at about $529,000, but a basement area has been added to the design accounting for the extra cost. The basement area will be used as a police pistol range and for limited storage.

Larson said the village has about $250,000 in revenue-sharing money on hand and will secure the rest through a loan that will be paid back with future revenue-sharing funds.

Buffalo Grove received about $85,000 yearly in federal revenue-sharing funds.

The facility will be a long-awaited form of relief for the village's public works department. The building is designed to house the department's 40 vehicles and other equipment now stored outdoors by park district offices because of a lack of space.

ORIGINALLY, officials planned to spend $338,000 on the building, but rising costs over the last year forced a reduction of some 10,000 square feet in its size as a money-saving measure.

Plans for the garage have been before the village board for more than a year, but delays resulted because of disagreements over its location. More recently, the village had some problems obtaining title to the land.

Tuesday, the board also awarded bids for installation and purchase of a new Civil-Defense warning siren system. Great Lakes Fire and Safety Equipment, Barrington, is selling Buffalo Grove the system for $14,595 while Thorne Electric Co., Wheaton, will install it for $5,047.

The sirens will be located in the north end of the village by the Raupp Memorial Museum on Dunham Lane, near the White Pine Ditch area on White Pine Road and in the Cambridge-on-the-Lake subdivision on Harvard Lane.

THE SIRENS will be used only to alert residents to tornado warnings, when one has been sighted in the area, said Larson. They will be activated from the police department where tornado information is received from the National Weather Service and the Illinois State Police.

The sirens will be operational by July and Larson said they also will be tested once a month.

A federal matching grant is helping pay for the sirens along with funds from Buffalo Grove's regular Civil Defense budget.

Ex-legislator Carroll gets Juckett seat

John W. (Bill) Carroll of Park Ridge, who served 18 years in the Illinois General Assembly before his retirement in 1972, has been named interim successor to Rep. Robert S. Juckett, R-Park Ridge, who died Feb. 2.

Carroll, 67, said Wednesday he will serve only Juckett's unexpired 4th District term and will not seek a full term in 1976.

The four Republican township committeemen responsible for appointing Juckett's successor said they will name a nine-member committee to select a GOP candidate for the seat in 1976. Candidates must file petitions for nomination by mid-December of this year.

Carroll was elected to the House of Representatives in 1956. After 10 years in the House, he was elected to the Senate where he served six years. He retired in 1972 due to poor health, but said Wednesday his health has been restored.

John W. Carroll

CARROLL, publisher of Pickwick Publishing Co., said Wednesday he was asked to take the appointment because of his legislative experience and because the large number of applicants for the House seat made a difficult choice for the committeemen.

He also said he had no specific legislative proposals. "I will just work for whatever the people in the district seem to need most," Carroll said.

Carroll served for many years, both in the House and Senate, as chairman of a special investigating committee for the Illinois Public Aid Commission.

In his first term as a representative, when his legislative district extended from Evanston to Elgin, Carroll convened a conference of mayors which evolved into the Northwest Municipal Conference.

BEFORE HIS first election, he served four years as administrative assistant to Lt. Gov. John William Chapman (under Gov. William Stratton).

"They told me it would be for the good of the party, and the Republican Party has been good to me," Carroll said of his return to the legislature.

With at least 16 serious candidates who had hoped for appointment to Juckett's seat, a Republican primary for the 1976 election appears a certainty.

Committeemen who made the appointment included Floyd T. Fulle of Maine Township, who held the majority of the weighted vote; Fred Yonkers of Wheeling Township; Sen. John Nimrod of Niles Township, and William Bingham of Northfield Township.

"We're trying to hit everybody in the village," Koeppen said. "We want to give everyone a chance at us."

HE SAID HE and the other COM-PAR candidates will start the sessions with a brief "election pitch" and then open the meeting to questions.

"The people will be able to ask anything they want and then we'll try to answer their questions," he said. "We'll answer all the questions as honestly and intelligently as we can. We want to show the people we have the ability to lead the village through the next four years."

Koeppen said a schedule of the open houses will be made public in a few days. In addition to the sessions at the school, COM-PAR candidates will attend a series of coffees at houses throughout the village.

COM-PAR is opposing the Wheeling Improvement Party and the Wheeling Representative Party in the upcoming election. Those parties also are expected to attend coffees during the campaign.

Supervisor assigned to Heritage bridge

A school supervisor has been assigned to help youngsters cross the footbridge over the drainage creek in Heritage Park in Wheeling.

Parents have complained that students from Meadowbrook West who cross the unsupervised bridge to get to Whitman School could fall into the drainage ditch below. The bridge, which has no guard rails, is being used temporarily by the students while the Jeffery Avenue bridge is closed for repairs. The footbridge is the only direct route for students to walk to school.

A supervisor will be at the footbridge during the time students will be going to and from school until the Jeffery bridge is open, said John Berger, Dist. 21 assistant superintendent.

The village also will put up a chain-link fence on both sides of the bridge to prevent children from falling into the ditch.

Students also may use the village bus service to get to and from school.

Mothers with youngsters three months or older will be able to leave their children at the Wheeling Presbyterian Church, 196 E. Highland Ave., Wheeling, Mondays for "mothers' day out."

From 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., the children will be cared for by mothers from the church's Outreach Group. There is a $1 charge for the first child, with 50 cents charged for each additional child.

Further information and reservations are available by calling 537-4449 or 537-9491. The church serves Wheeling, Prospect Heights, Buffalo Grove and Mount Prospect.

Parks to buy Childerley Retreat land for $250,000

by JOE FRANZ

The owners of the Childerley Retreat House property have agreed to sell the site to the Wheeling Park District for $250,000, The Herald learned Wednesday.

Roger Bjorvik, attorney for the park district, said a tentative agreement was reached recently with the Calvert Foundation, owners of the 10-acre site.

He said, however, the park district will not be able to enter into a sales contract until it receives word on a request for federal funding to help finance the purchase.

"We haven't entered into a contract, but we have gotten a handshake and a nod of the head indicating that they will sell the property to the park district," Bjorvik said. "Now we're just waiting for Uncle Sam to approve the funding."

PARK OFFICIALS have applied for a $119,500 grant from the Bureau of Outdoor Recreation. They have said the park district intends to purchase the Childerley property with or without the federal funds.

Bjorvik said, however, by entering into a sales contract now, the park district would make itself ineligible for federal funds.

Park Supt. David Phillips has said he expects to receive word on the federal grant sometime this month. He said if the grant is refused, the park district will have to find another way to finance the purchase.

Park officials have proposed acquisition of the Childerley property, 506 McHenry Rd., for development of an outdoor-education center. In addition, it has been proposed the site be used for a summer day camp, a community meeting place and possibly a community zoo.

The Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC) recently gave the park district's request for federal funding second priority ranking among all land-acquisition projects in Cook County. NIPC, a regional planning agency, evaluates federal funding requests by local agencies.

PHILLIPS SAID the latest NIPC ranking will "greatly improve" the park district's chances of receiving the grant. Before the ranking was updated, the Childerley property was given a 16th priority.

Phillips said the Childerley property received a higher ranking in its second evaluation by NIPC because of the park district's recent acquisition of 3.1 acres adjacent to the site. The ranking also improved, he said, because the park district plans a bike trail through the new park.

The Niles Park District, which has applied for federal funds to purchase a golf course, is the only district in Cook County ranked higher than Wheeling. The Morton Grove Park District, seeking funds for another park, is tied with Wheeling.

The proposed purchase of the Childerley property is part of a general park district-expansion program designed to bring new sites into the park system.

In addition to Childerley, the park district is attempting to acquire a 10-acre site on Schoenbeck Road for development as a community park. The park district was awarded $100,000 federal grant last summer to help pay for the property.

Although the park district is involved in condemnation proceedings and the cost of the land has not been set, park officials estimate the property is worth $225,000. Bjorvik said the condemnation suit is scheduled to be considered in Circuit Court April 1.

Citizens' committee to weigh boundaries

A citizens committee in Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 will discuss possible school boundary changes at 8 p.m. today at the administration building, 999 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

The committee will prepare suggestions for 1975-76 school boundaries and look into long-range boundary possibilities.

Growing enrollments at Field, Tarkington and Alcott schools may require boundary changes next year. The schools are at capacity this year and expect increased enrollment during the next several years.

The committee is expected to complete its report by March 13.

2 indicted in backdating of Nixon papers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Watergate grand jury Wednesday indicted an attorney and a document appraiser for their parts in backdating former President Richard M. Nixon's gift of vice presidential papers to the National Archives.

The Nixon's 1969 tax return showed the gift, valued at $567,000, was made March 27, 1969. Actually, the papers granting the gift were signed and notarized April 10, 1970 — well after Congress passed a law sharply cutting back tax benefits for gifts made after July 23, 1969.

The indictment named Los Angeles attorney Frank DeMarco Jr., 49, and Chicago appraiser Ralph G. Newman, 63.

Former White House deputy assistant Edward L. Morgan, who already has pleaded guilty for his part in backdating the gift, was named an unindicted co-conspirator. Morgan was sentenced in December to four months in prison and 20 months probation.

DeMARCO was charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States, making false statements to the Internal Revenue Service, and obstructing an inquiry of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

Frank DeMarco Jr.

Ralph G. Newman

Newman was charged with conspiracy to defraud, and with assisting in the preparation of a false document filed with a federal income-tax return.

The court said conviction for conspiracy to defraud and for making false statements to the IRS carry maximum penalties of five years and a $10,000 fine on each count; obstructing a congressional inquiry, five years and $5,000; and assisting in preparing a false statement three years and $3,000.

IN A STATEMENT from his Los Angeles law office, DeMarco said he had a "strange feeling of relief" in knowing the matter was about to come to some form of final resolution.

"I have been living under a cloud of doubt for over a year ever since Mr. Nixon's tax troubles first came to light and I welcome the chance to vindicate myself," he said.

"I have done nothing wrong. I have conspired with no one, in my judgment. I have made some mistakes but they were neither intentional nor criminal."

After the IRS ruled against Nixon's deductions, he agreed to pay almost $500,000 in back taxes and interest penalties. He said his personal savings would be "virtually wiped out."

NIXON'S pre-presidential papers were moved to storage facilities under control of the General Services Administration March 26-27, 1969. But this act itself was not claimed to constitute the "gift," the indictment said, adding that DeMarco, Newman and Morgan took various parts in having a Nixon deed actually transferring the material to the government fraudulently backdated to March 27, 1969.

The IRS audit division began a reaudit of the Nixon tax returns Dec. 7, 1973, and continued into 1974. The GSA and the joint congressional committee entered the investigation in 1974 at the request of Nixon.

The indictment said that during these investigations, "the conspirators would conceal and cause the concealment of various documents . . ." and "would destroy and cause the destruction of other such documents."

Newman known for Abe work

Ralph G. Newman, indicted Wednesday in the backdating of former President Richard M. Nixon's vice presidential papers, is a historian most noted for his dissertations on the life and times of Abraham Lincoln and his accounts of the Civil War.

Newman, president of the board of the Chicago Public Library and a private bookseller, served as appraiser for numerous American Presidents and was paid more than $12,000 for the work he did for Nixon.

The papers, Newman said later, were probably worth more than the $576,000 he said they were worth in 1970. He has estimated their revised worth at more than $1 million.

Newman, 63, attended four colleges and received doctor of letters and doctor of laws degrees. He is the founder of the Abraham Lincoln Book Shop Inc., Chicago, owner of the Americana House Publishing Co., and recipient of several awards for his literary work, including several books he authored or edited.

"possibly connect the taxpayer with the preparation of the return" — thus providing the basis for a fraud penalty against Nixon. The question became moot when President Ford pardoned Nixon Sept. 9 for all Watergate-related offenses.

Ex-legislator Carroll to succeed Juckett

John W. (Bill) Carroll of Park Ridge, who served 16 years in the Illinois General Assembly before his retirement in 1972, has been named interim successor to Rep. Robert S. Juckett, R-Park Ridge, who died Feb. 2.

Carroll, 67, said Wednesday he will serve only Juckett's unexpired 4th District term and will not seek a full term in 1976.

The four Republican township committeemen responsible for appointing Juckett's successor said they will name a nine member committee to select a GOP candidate for the seat in 1976. Candidates must file petitions for nomination by mid-December of this year.

John W. Carroll

of the party, and the Republican Party has been good to me," Carroll said of his return to the legislature.

With at least 10 serious candidates who had hoped for appointment to Juckett's seat, a Republican primary for the 1976 election appears a certainty.

Committeemen who made the appointment included Floyd T. Fullie of Maine Township, who held the majority of the weighted vote; Fred Yonkers of Wheeling Township; Sen. John Nimrod of Niles Township, and William Birmingham of Northfield Township.

ever the people in the district seem to need most," Carroll said.

Carroll served for many years, both in the House and Senate, as chairman of a special investigating committee for the Illinois Public Aid Commission.

In his first term as a representative, when his legislative district extended from Evanston to Elgin, Carroll convened a conference of mayors which evolved into the Northwest Municipal Conference.

BEFORE HIS first election, he served four years as administrative assistant to Lt. Gov. John William Chapman (under Gov. William Stratton).

Candidates for the Oakton Community College Board of Trustees election in April can obtain nominating petitions from David Hilquist, vice president for business and finance, at Building 3 on the Oakton campus, 7900 N. Nagle, Morton Grove. Filing deadline is March 21.

Two trustees will be elected April 12 to three-year terms. The terms of incumbents Vivian H. Medlik and LeRoy Wauck will expire.

Extension asked for Superblock

by STEVE BROWN

Developers of the proposed Superblock project in downtown Des Plaines want another extension on their agreement with the city for the construction timetable.

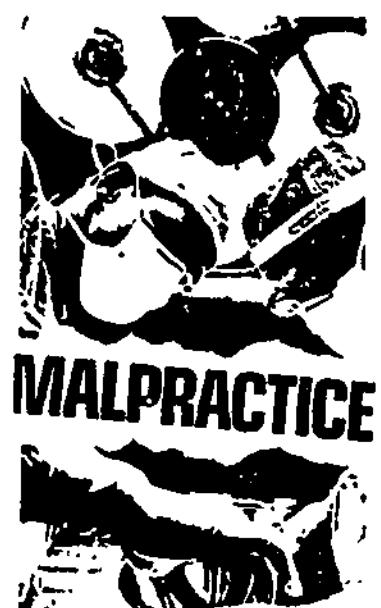

The planned-unit development ordinance governing construction of the retail and commercial development project calls for the Des Plaines Mall Corp. to obtain financing by March 1.

Mayor Herbert H. Behrel said the developers have requested an extension of about 120 days. He said high interest rates continue to hamper arrangements for financing the $14 million project that is to be built at the corner of Lee Street. (Continued on Page 1)

Solutions don't come easily, but proposals abound...

by KAREN BLECHA
Last of a series

If some doctors have their way, an arbitration board would decide how much money you could collect for medical malpractice.

If lawyers have their way, filing a lawsuit still would be the way to get compensation.

Arbitration and continued use of the courts are only two solutions proposed to the crisis caused by the rapid rise in medical malpractice suits and the high cost of malpractice insurance. Proposals include:

• Voluntary or mandatory arbitration. A patient would sign an agreement to submit any malpractice claims to arbitration rather than court. A board of doctors, attorneys and laymen would hear charges and make judgments. Some proposals include setting a $200,000 limit on awards. Some set specific damages which would be awarded each injury.

The Illinois Hospital Assn. and Illinois State Medical Society favor trying out

such a plan that they believe would speed handling of claims and possibly save money. The Chicago and Illinois Bar Associations oppose it because they do not think a patient would get as good a deal before a panel of arbitrators as they would in court.

• No-fault insurance. Physicians or patients would buy insurance under which aggrieved patients could collect for malpractice, based on an injury-damages schedule, without trial and without large lawyers' fees.

Opponents, including insurance companies, say there is no way to define what would be compensable injury under no-fault. Doctors believe the compensation should include medical expenses and loss of wages but none for pain and suffering because they say it is impossible to evaluate.

Proponents say local medical societies could define the injuries they would pay for.

• Establishment of state Commissions (Continued on Page 15)

Filing suit against a doctor or hospital is not the only way to get results on a medical complaint.

Four hospitals in the Northwest suburbs have patient-relations programs to take care of gripes. People with complaints about their doctors can go to the Chicago Medical Society or the Illinois Dept. of Education and Registration.

"We would prefer that patients come to us before going to court," said Brother Felix Bettendorf, president-chief executive officer at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village. He said patients with complaints can report them to the administration or to the medical director of the hospital.

AT HOLY FAMILY Hospital in Des Plaines, a patient with a complaint can take it to the nurse-in-charge or to one of the nurses assigned to patient relations. If a patient cannot get satisfaction, he can take his complaint to administration.

"If a patient falls or is injured in the hospital he would receive medical care and an X-ray to determine the extent of injury at no charge," said Jim McQuaid, hospital spokesman.

McQuaid and Ann Finney, in charge of patient relations at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, suggest patients with complaints about their doctors talk it over with the doctor first. Mrs. Finney said a patient can file a written complaint with the hospital medical staff.

GRIEVANCES ABOUT physicians are investigated by the Chicago Medical Society, which tries to act as mediator between patient and physician, said Lee Forre, assistant to the executive administrator.

"We do not have any power or authority over doctors," he said. "But about 75 per cent of the time our mediation works."

If a patient with a serious complaint cannot get action, he can take his grievance to the Dept. of Education and Registration, which licenses doctors in Illinois.

On a formal complaint, a hearing would be held before the medical-licensing committee, which has the power to revoke a doctor's license.

year-old boxing program taught by former professional boxer Farouk Hassan. The program is open to youngsters 10 years and older.

THE PROPER boxing gear may look awkward on a youngster this size, but it is part of the training offered through the Mount Prospect Park District.

Who said boxing is a dying sport?

Former champ finds
kids who think it's fun

There were no winners and no losers Saturday when 20 young boxers met to show off their pugilistic skills in the basement of the Lions Park Recreation Center.

The matches, designed to allow parents to see their children's progress, were primarily sparring. The boxing show was the end product of several weeks of work through the Mount Prospect Park District boxing program, which is the brainchild of Farouk Hassan, a former professional boxer.

The program began about a year ago when Hassan approached a park board member about starting a boxing program. Hassan worked with the park district's Greg Repede to develop the program which has attracted about 25 to 30 boys for each 10-week session.

Repede said the park district was probably the first in the area to begin a boxing program. He said he looked for other programs when he needed information on starting a boxing program, but couldn't find any. "Mr. Hassan hadn't taught the program before so he wasn't real sure what he needed or how it would work," Repede said.

MORE RECENTLY, Repede said he has noticed that other park districts are beginning to offer boxing programs. "I've seen a couple in brochures more recently," he said.

Hassan, who was a Golden Gloves winner in Detroit, uses two assistants to help coach youngsters 10 years and older. While the entire group works out together, the youngsters are divided according to age and ability.

One of the assistants, Jerry Lee, also provided the park district with its first boxing ring. Lee constructed the ring himself and donated it to the park district. The ring can be put up and taken down for other activities in the basement.

Repede said the boxing program is an experiment that has been successful. "They enjoy it," he said of those who participate in the program. "We have a number of kids who have been with it the whole time."

Hike in students doesn't materialize

School border changes not needed

by BOB GALLAS

Boundary changes made in expectation of a flood of children at three schools in Des Plaines and Mount Prospect apparently were unnecessary and have cost Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 more than $20,000 in extra teacher salaries and busing expenses.

The changes were made in the boundaries of Brentwood and High Ridge Knolls schools in Des Plaines and John Jay School in Mount Prospect because 85 children were expected to move into three Mount Prospect apartment complexes this year.

The citizens' boundary committee estimated 56 children would eventually attend Brentwood from the Crystal Towers and Forest Cove apartment complexes.

They estimated 26 would come from Laurel Estates apartments to High Ridge Knolls.

BUT WITH Crystal Towers about half built and Forest Cove nearing completion, Brentwood School has received only three students and it is estimated only 10, rather than 56, will attend when the units are completed later this year.

Construction problems have delayed Laurel Estates and that complex has no residents. So High Ridge Knolls has none of the estimated 29 projected to come from that complex.

Meanwhile, each building was assigned one extra teacher this year in anticipation of an influx of students. Salaries for the two extra teachers is estimated at $20,000.

Board member Judy Zanca has charged the whole boundary question, which caused bitter feelings on the part of Des Plaines residents in the two school areas, was a "smokescreen" engineered by former Supt. James Erviti to duck other issues.

Erviti, whose forced resignation was accepted in December, was in the midst of negotiating a settlement of his contract with the board in August. Mrs. Zanca, who consistently opposed the boundary changes, said the changes were not necessary but were a diversion to take the heat off the controversy swirling around Erviti.

OTHER SOURCES in the district have confirmed Mrs. Zanca's assertion that Erviti wanted to take the heat off himself with another issue.

Opponents to the boundary changes wanted to wait and see what enrollment would come from the apartments.

Disheartened by the failure of their predictions to come true and the controversy that engulfed their committee, members of the boundary committee are at a loss to explain what happened.

"The whole thing just turned into a fiasco," said Nita Stamm, committee chairman.

A great deal of confusion on the committee resulted over what multiplier would be used to determine how many children would move into the complex, she said. The multiplier is a factor used to determine the number of children expected to come from the apartments.

"If any committee is formed to study those boundaries again, they'd better take a long look at that multiplier," said committee member Marilyn Magsamen. "Let's face it, we blew it."

Committee member Erwin Poklacki said he intends to get the boundaries changed back to the old boundaries. "That's ridiculous," said Poklacki when informed of how his committee's predictions have turned out.

and Prairie Avenue.

Besides the extension, The Herald also has learned that some local businessmen are considering an effort to raise additional funds to stimulate the project.

Reportedly, the businessmen may try to accumulate $1 million in the effort.

"BEHREI SAID the project definitely is alive and construction probably will begin this summer.

Mel Helms, spokesman for the developer, J. R. Gottlieb, said financing is the only facet of the project that is incomplete.

Helms said he has not heard about any new local effort to gather financing for the project.

"The large insurance companies have just begun to come back on the market with money and they are taking a much more critical look at all possible projects," Helms said.

He said some persons forget that the project has really only been a reality since last May when the city and the developers entered into an agreement covering a variety of public improvements for the project.

"The project has been a dream for many years, but before that agreement was prepared nothing could have happened," he said. Helms said once the agreement was signed, the developers moved ahead with construction bids, but once the bids were returned the economy began to worsen and mortgage funds became limited.

"We hope to have final financing in the 120-day limit," he said.

ALTHOUGH THE city council probably will approve the extension, there might be new negotiations on the lease agreement involving a 500-car parking garage which the city will build to accommodate tenants in the project's 12-story office tower.

Ald. Gerald Meyer, 7th, said rising costs of construction might require the city to renegotiate the lease agreement. The developer has agreed to pay $20 per space a month for 408 parking spaces and also approved an escalation clause which will increase the price over the 25 to 35-year life of the revenue bonds that will be sold to finance the garage.

The city council is expected to vote on the extension of the timetable at its next meeting March 3.

Seeks to reduce jet noise

City to enter suit against FAA, CAB

Des Plaines will enter into a suit filed by Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott which charges the Civil Aeronautics Board and the Federal Aviation Administration with failing to take positive action to reduce noise at O'Hare Airport.

The city will enter the suit as a party plaintiff against the two agencies in an attempt to emphasize local concern with the noise problem. Other communities bordering the airport have taken similar action.

Ald. Alan Abrams, 8th, chairman of the city code and judiciary committee, said the suit in addition seeks to enjoin the airport from adding any more aircraft which could compound the noise problem.

The council approved the committee recommendation without a dissenting vote, but failed to go along with the committee's recommendation that Robert DiLeonardi, city corporation counsel, handle the case.

BY A VOTE of 10 to 4 the council agreed that the matter should be handled by City Atty. Charles Hug as part of his regular duties. As corporation counsel, DiLeonardi is paid a fee for each matter he handles for the city.

Abrams said DiLeonardi could handle the matter better because he is more familiar with the case than Hug and also is more accustomed to dealing with federal court matters.

"The city attorney has a full-time job which takes up much of his time," Abrams said. "I think Mr. Hug is getting some interesting experience in some of the cases he is handling, but I think the city could be best served in this matter with Mr. DiLeonardi handling it because of his background."

Ald. Gerald Meyer, 7th, disagreed with Abrams saying this case could give Hug some valuable experience.

Ald. Carmen Sarlo, 6th, agreed with Meyer. "Our city attorney may never get experience if we don't allow him to go out and get some."

After the vote Mayor Herbert Behrel said Hug would be free to confer with DiLeonardi about the case for advice and the corporation counsel may bill the city for his services in this capacity.

City Council wrapup

$2.85 million water-bond sale awarded

The city council this week awarded the sale of $2.85 million in water-revenue bonds to John Nuveen & Co., Chicago, at an interest rate of 6.4992 per cent.

Nuveen was the lowest of three bidders on the bond sale. The company represented a group of five investment firms which submitted the low bid.

Mayor Herbert H. Behrel said the council's action means bonds will be printed and should be ready to be turned over to the paying agent, the Des Plaines National Bank, by the first week in March.

Money from the bond sale will be used for the city's water-improvement program.

Tree contract OK'd

The council awarded a contract to the Robert W. Anderson Co. for tree-trimming work to be done this spring. Also approved was a request to advertise for bids for the purchase of 350 parkway trees for planting this spring. Bids for the trees will be opened March 12.

Police-cadet plan tabled

The police committee reported that no action would be taken this year on a request to start a police-cadet program. Ald. Kenneth Kehe, 2nd, chairman of the committee, said the proposal had merit but there was no room in the upcoming budget for the proposed $10,000 program.

Kehe said the committee agreed to consider the program for partial implementation in fiscal 1976.

G&I gets siren work

The G & I Electric Co., Des Plaines, was awarded a contract to install a Civil Defense siren near Wolf Road and Touhy Avenue. The company was low bidder at $10,450. The city already has received approval of an application for federal matching funds.

Wolf injury claim OK'd

The council approved a workers' compensation settlement of $2,371.29 with Fire Dept. Chief David Wolf. Wolf injured his right hand while playing handball in December 1973.

Ald. Charles Bolek, 3rd, questioned Wolf's claim because the injury was not incurred in the act of duty. But Behrel said firemen are required to play a certain amount of handball while on duty as part of their training. Therefore the injury technically was sustained while Wolf was on duty, Behrel said.

Bolek and Ald. George Olen, 2nd, voted against the payment.

Vedral on housing panel

William Vedral was reappointed to the city housing commission. His term will run through March 4, 1979.

Tentative OK for sidewalks

A $100,000 sidewalk project which will lead to the construction of about 12,000 square feet of new sidewalks has received preliminary approval from the city council.

Eleven public benefit sidewalk areas along five major streets in the city and several other local streets have been designated for the project. Although locations of homeowners to be affected by the project have not been determined, Ald. Richard Ward, 8th, chairman of the streets and traffic committee, said the areas designated for construction are:

- 1,115 feet on Elmhurst Road between Galt Road and Thacker Street.
- 3,520 feet on Touhy Avenue between Maple and Scott streets.
- A total of 4,032 feet along two separate sections of Oakton Street.
- 650 feet on Algonquin Road.
- A total of 1,430 feet on two separate sections of Rand Road, one by North School and another north of Wolf Road.
- A small section along Birch Street.
- Three small parcels on sidestreets in the 3rd Ward.

Ward said the projected cost of the project is about $100,000 with $46,000 of the total to be paid by the city as public benefits and $60,000 to be assessed to homeowners.

Ward said the cost of the project was determined using an estimate of $1.73 per square foot, a figure which he said is conservatively high to include costs for excavation and grading work which may be required. Bids for the project may actually come in substantially lower than

Police arrest hunters near Marshall, Willie

Three persons were arrested by Des Plaines police Wednesday after they were caught hunting rabbits and pheasants near Willie and Marshall roads.

Patrolman Wendell Whited said he heard gunshots while on patrol in the vicinity of Willie and Marshall roads and saw a car leaving the area. Whited stopped the auto and found 12 dead rabbits and 1 dead pheasant in the back seat of the car along with three gun cases.

Arrested and charged with discharging a firearm within city limits were Dean Duda, 18, of 8330 Newland Ave., Niles; Raymond Zakrajewski, 19, of 2232 N. Menard Ave., Chicago, and Donald C. Pernamian, 19, of 2253 N. Mason, Chicago.

The three are scheduled to appear April 7 in the Des Plaines branch of Circuit Court.

Recovered as evidence in the car were two .22-caliber rifles, a shotgun, 37 rifle shells and 36 shotgun shells.

Citizens' goals panel to meet

The Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 citizens' committee studying district goals will meet at 7:30 p.m. today at the district administration center, 2123 S. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights. A final committee report is due in early June.

estimated, he added.

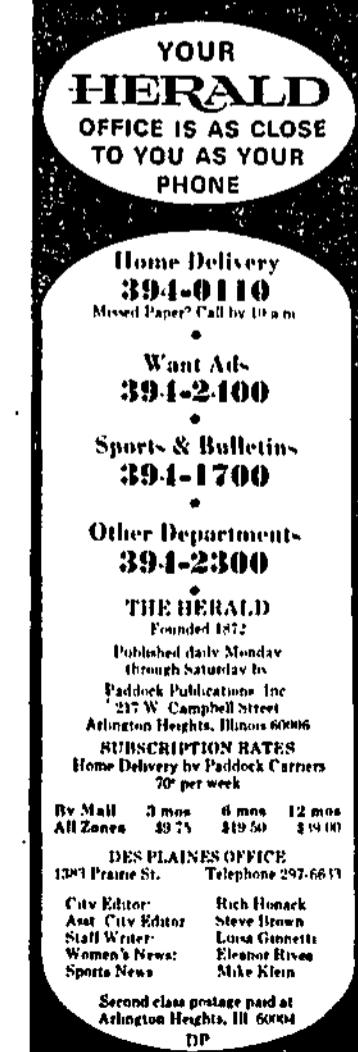

Ward said the number of homeowners affected by the work is being determined by the engineering department and these persons will be contacted before any further action on the matter is taken by the city council.

Ward said the project will not be reviewed by the board of local improvements because of provisions in city ordinances regarding new sidewalk development.

IN CASES where homeowners have double frontage lots where sidewalks exist in front of the home, the city will pay the entire cost of construction for walks in back of their homes, Ward said. Improved lots will be allowed 30 per cent public benefit with owners paying 70 per cent of the cost and unimproved or vacant lots will be assessed the entire cost of the sidewalk construction.

Ward said the areas designated for sidewalk development have been studied since last summer with recommendations for sites to be included in the list coming from aldermen, homeowners and school groups.

Ward said he hopes construction can begin this year.

Centel gets union charges in policy-change dispute

Union officials said Wednesday they have filed formal grievances with Centel Telephone Co. over a working-conditions dispute that caused 450 employees to walk off the job Tuesday.

Officials for the company and the union, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 336, said all of the workers returned to work Wednesday.

The dispute involved two policy changes by the company that caused employees who install business telephones to start work 30 minutes later and eliminated a provision which allowed some construction crews to return to their garage for lunch.

THE WILDCAT action involved mostly installers, repairmen and construction crews from garages at 1201 Touhy Ave. and on Oakton Street. Other workers in Centel offices in Des Plaines also left their jobs. The company employs about 930 union workers in the area to serve its 70,000 customers in Des Plaines, Park Ridge and a portion of Mount Prospect.

Neither union officials nor a company spokesman could estimate how long it would take to resolve the dispute.

Union officials said the action by Centel represented a unilateral change in contract conditions with the IBEW workers.

Centel officials labeled the move an illegal work stoppage. They also indicated that an undetermined number of employees, mostly members of the construction crews, had been suspended for one-half day Tuesday.

The strike resulted from an apparent modification of the company's policy which had allowed the crews to return to their garage for lunch. Company officials said the crews usually did not return.

They also noted the men are paid $1.25 per day as an incentive to stay on the street rather than return to the garage.

Company officials said that after the walkout occurred management personnel were used to keep the system operating and stated there was no disruption in service.

The company spokesman said most of the crews had traditionally remained on the street.

HOWEVER THE crews began returning recently, apparently after the PBX installers were given a later starting time.

The PBX crews had begun work at 8 a.m., but the company recently changed the time to have the installers begin at 8:30 a.m. The company said the changes were made to increase efficiency.

Company officials said that after the walkout occurred management personnel were used to keep the system operating and stated there was no disruption in service.

'Abandon connector street plans'

About 50 residents of Mill and River streets have petitioned the city council asking that any plans to build a connector street between the two roads be abandoned.

The petition, presented to the council Tuesday, says a connector street between the two dead-end streets would create four problems:

- Increased traffic, noise and air pollution.
- Safety hazards to senior citizens, children and others including pets.
- Substantial and unnecessary cost to the city and the taxpayers in buying the land and building the street.
- Detraction from the beauty and quiet of the forest preserve at the east end of the streets.

The petitions were referred to the streets and traffic committee but Ald. Thomas Koplos, 1st, asked that no action be taken on the matter until the committee can hear from other residents of the area who are in favor of the connector.

Bo'ln Koplos and his fellow 1st Ward Ald. Joseph Szabo have asked the city to proceed with cost estimates for building the street, which they contend a majority of residents in the area want.

Mayor Herbert H. Behrel has said he is not convinced a majority of residents in the area want the connector built and also has cited the cost of the project as a deterrent to proceeding with any construction plans.

IN ORDER TO build the street, the city will have to purchase land owned by the Forest Preserve District at the east end of Mill Street for a right-of-way. Coupled with actual construction costs, Behrel contends the project may be financially unwise.

2 indicted in backdating of Nixon papers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Watergate grand jury Wednesday indicted an attorney and a document appraiser for their parts in backdating former President Richard M. Nixon's gift of vice presidential papers to the National Archives.

The Nixons' 1969 tax return showed the gift, valued at $367,000, was made March 27, 1969. Actually, the papers granting the gift were signed and notarized April 10, 1970 — well after Congress passed a law sharply cutting back tax benefits for gifts made after July 23, 1969.

The indictment named Los Angeles attorney Frank DeMarco Jr., 49, and Chicago appraiser Ralph G. Newman, 63.

Former White House deputy assistant Edward L. Morgan, who already has pleaded guilty for his part in backdating the gift, was named an unindicted co-conspirator. Morgan was sentenced in December to four months in prison and 20 months probation.

DeMARCO WAS charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States, making false statements to the Internal Revenue Service, and obstructing an inquiry of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

Frank DeMarco Jr.

Ralph G. Newman

Newman was charged with conspiracy to defraud, and with assisting in the preparation of a false document filed with a federal income-tax return.

The court said conviction for conspiracy to defraud and for making false statements to the IRS carry maximum penalties of five years and a $10,000 fine on each count; obstructing a congressional inquiry five years and $5,000; and assisting in preparing a false statement three years and $5,000.

IN A STATEMENT from his Los Angeles law office, DeMarco said he had a "strange feeling of relief" in knowing the matter was about to come to some form of final resolution.

"I have been living under a cloud of doubt for over a year ever since Mr. Nixon's tax troubles first came to light and I welcome the chance to vindicate myself," he said.

"I have done nothing wrong. I have conspired with no one, in my judgment. I have made some mistakes but they were neither intentional nor criminal."

After the IRS ruled against Nixon's deductions, he agreed to pay almost $300,000 in back taxes and interest penalties. He said his personal savings would be "virtually wiped out."

NIXON'S pre-presidential papers were moved to storage facilities under control of the General Services Administration March 26-27, 1969. But this act itself was not claimed to constitute the "gift," the indictment said, adding that DeMarco, Newman and Morgan took various parts in having a Nixon deed actually transferring the material to the government fraudulently backdated to March 27, 1969.

The IRS audit division began a reaudit of the Nixon tax returns Dec. 7, 1973, and continued into 1974. The GSA and the joint congressional committee entered the investigation in 1974 at the request of Nixon.

The indictment said that during these investigations, "the conspirators would conceal and cause the concealment of various documents . . . and 'would destroy and cause the destruction of other such documents.'"

Ralph G. Newman, indicted Wednesday in the backdating of former President Richard M. Nixon's vice presidential papers, is a historian most noted for his dissertations on the life and times of Abraham Lincoln and his accounts of the Civil War.

Newman, president of the board of the Chicago Public Library and a private bookseller, served as appraiser for numerous American Presidents and was paid more than $12,000 for the work he did for Nixon.

The papers, Newman said later, were probably worth more than the $376,000 he said they were worth in 1970. He has estimated their revised worth at more than $1 million.

Newman, 63, attended four colleges and received doctor of letters and doctor of laws degrees. He is the founder of the Abraham Lincoln Book Shop Inc., Chicago, owner of the Americana House Publishing Co., and recipient of several awards for his literary work, including several books he authored or edited.

"possibly connect the taxpayer with the preparation of the return" — thus providing the basis for a fraud penalty against Nixon. The question became moot when President Ford pardoned Nixon Sept. 9 for all Watergate-related offenses.

The papers, Newman said later, were probably worth more than the $376,000 he said they were worth in 1970. He has estimated their revised worth at more than $1 million.

He is the founder of the Abraham Lincoln Book Shop Inc., Chicago, owner of the Americana House Publishing Co., and recipient of several awards for his literary work, including several books he authored or edited.

During the government's study of the claimed deduction, IRS investigators urged a grand jury be impaneled to investigate DeMarco, Newman and Morgan.

The investigators said if Nixon's aides could be compelled to testify, they could

More improvements planned

Lenient borrowing policy boosts library use 20%

by MARILYN McDONALD

A combination of new programs, more materials and fewer restrictions on borrowing has boosted circulation in the Rolling Meadows Public Library 20 per cent in the last four months. Librarian Judith Drescher plans to build on that increased popularity by adding professional staff, programs for adults and increased library-school cooperation.

But the improvements will cost the taxpayer. The library, long at a tax rate of 15 cents per $100 equalized assessed valuation, will seek a tax increase "within the next year-and-a-half to two years," Mrs. Drescher said, as expansion becomes necessary.

Mrs. DRESCHER, who became head librarian last summer following the retirement of Virginia R. Connell, said one of the main reasons for increased circulation is the less-stringent borrowing policies adopted by the library in November.

Library users, once restricted to borrowing five books for only two weeks at a time, may now borrow as many materials as they like. Renewals, once forbidden, may be made by phone. Reservation of books, also previously forbidden, is now permitted. And children who can legally print their names, no matter what their age, may apply for a library card.

"The restricted borrowing policies were started when the library opened and materials were short," said Mrs. Drescher. "Now, there's no need for restrictive policies."

Another boon to circulation has resulted from expanded programming for children. In the past, one story hour a month was held in the children's department. Today, three story hours a week are held, and there is interest for more, said Mrs. Drescher.

CHILDREN'S programming has been expanded to include seven preschool programs each month at the Rolling Meadows Park District preschool. "I've noticed a big duplication of children at the preschool and here at the library," Mrs. Drescher said. "I think they tell their parents what is going on at preschool, and their parents bring them to the library. The parents, in turn, spend more time here with their children and use the library themselves," she said.

Browsing and reading at the library has been made more comfortable with the addition of lounge furniture, another reason Mrs. Drescher cites for increased use of the library. "People will come in to read during the day just because we now have places for them. We've been rediscovered," said Mrs. Drescher.

The Rolling Meadows Library is making more of an effort to reach local schools with several new programs. Classes studying a particular subject can request the library to loan them a number of books on that subject for classroom use. Mrs. Drescher is working on a cooperative program with Rolling Meadows High School so books on reserve in the school library may be on reserve at the public library for student use in the evenings. And classroom field trips to the library for instruction in using the library are still encouraged.

AS THE LIBRARY'S clientele grows, so does the library's inventory. More than 1,750 books were added to the collection since October, and the library is now preparing 450 cassette tapes to add to its audio-visual offerings. Mrs. Drescher said an effort is being made to add books dealing with fiction, useful arts, fine arts and crafts, the most heavily borrowed areas.

Programming for adults is one of the main areas Mrs. Drescher hopes to develop later this year, after many of the children's programs are taken over by a professional children's librarian. The library plans to hire this spring. Discussion groups, adult craft groups, and programs developed in connection with the city's senior citizens are some of the things Mrs. Drescher has in mind.

Perhaps the clearest sign of increased library usage in Rolling Meadows is the condition of the place on Saturdays. "It's sheer pandemonium," said Mrs. Drescher, obviously not minding the noise.

TINA SMITH and Keith Sesko, fourth-grade students at Central Road School, Rolling Meadows, rehearse for the play they and their classmates will present Saturday at the Rolling Meadows Library. The play, 'Tale of the Tiger,' will be enacted with puppets made by the students.

Parks sponsor Long Grove trip

The Rolling Meadows Park District will sponsor a trip to Long Grove Feb. 26.

A bus will leave the sports complex, 3900 Owl Dr., at 9 a.m. and will return a 2 p.m.

The fee for the trip is $7, which includes transportation and lunch. Babysitting will be available for children 3 years old to school age.

Deadline for registration is Wednesday. For further information and registration, call the park district offices at 362-4384.

Solutions don't come easily, but proposals abound...

by KAREN BLECHA

Last of a series

If some doctors have their way, an arbitration board would decide how much money you could collect for medical malpractice.

If lawyers have their way, filing a lawsuit still would be the way to get compensation.

Arbitration and continued use of the courts are only two solutions proposed to the crisis caused by the rapid rise in medical malpractice suits and the high cost of malpractice insurance. Proposals include:

• Voluntary or mandatory arbitration. A patient would sign an agreement to submit any malpractice claims to arbitration rather than court. A board of doctors, attorneys and laymen would hear charges and make judgments. Some proposals include setting a $200,000 limit on awards. Some set specific damages which would be awarded each injury.

The Illinois Hospital Assn. and Illinois State Medical Society favor trying out

such a plan that they believe would speed handling of claims and possibly save money. The Chicago and Illinois Bar Associations oppose it because they do not think patient would get as good a deal before a panel of arbitrators as they would in court.

• No-fault insurance. Physicians or patients would buy insurance under which aggrieved patients could collect for malpractice, based on an injury-damages schedule, without trial and without large lawyers' fees.

Opponents, including insurance companies, say there is no way to define what would be compensable injury under no-fault. Doctors believe the compensation should include medical expenses and loss of wages but none for pain and suffering because they say it is impossible to evaluate.

Proponents say local medical societies could define the injuries they would pay for.

• Establishment of state Commissions

Where patients can go instead of filing lawsuits

Filing suit against a doctor or hospital is not the only way to get results on a medical complaint.

Four hospitals in the Northwest suburbs have patient-relations programs to take care of gripes. People with complaints about their doctors can go to the Chicago Medical Society or the Illinois Dept. of Education and Registration.

"We would prefer that patients come to us before going to court," said Brother Felix Bettendorf, president-chief executive officer at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village. He said patients with complaints can report them to the administration or to the medical director of the hospital.

AT HOLY FAMILY Hospital in Des Plaines, a patient with a complaint can take it to the nurse-in-charge or to one of the nurses assigned to patient relations. If a patient cannot get satisfaction, he can take his complaint to administration.

"If a patient falls or is injured in the hospital he would receive medical care and an X-ray to determine the extent of injury at no charge," said Jim McQuaid, hospital spokesman.

McQuaid and Ann Finney, in charge of patient relations at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, suggest patients with complaints about their doctors talk it over with the doctor first. Mrs. Finney said a patient can file a written complaint with the hospital medical staff.

GRIEVANCES ABOUT physicians are investigated by the Chicago Medical Society, which tries to act as mediator between patient and physician, said Lee Forres, assistant to the executive administrator.

"We do not have any power or authority over doctors," he said. "But about 75 per cent of the time our mediation works."

If a patient with a serious complaint cannot get action, he can take his grievance to the Dept. of Education and Registration, which licenses doctors in Illinois.

On a formal complaint, a hearing would be held before the medical-licensing committee, which has the power to revoke a doctor's license.

But won't run in 1976

Ex-legislator Carroll gets Juckett seat

John W. (Bill) Carroll of Park Ridge, who served 16 years in the Illinois General Assembly before his retirement in 1972, has been named interim successor to Rep. Robert S. Juckett, R-Park Ridge, who died Feb. 2.

Carroll, 67, said Wednesday he will serve on Juckett's unexpired 4th District term and will not seek a full term in 1976. The four Republican township committeemen responsible for appointing Juckett's successor said they will name a nine-member committee to select a GOP candidate for the seat in 1976. Candidates must file petitions for nomination by mid-December of this year.

Carroll was elected to the House of Representatives in 1956. After 10 years in the House, he was elected to the Senate where he served six years. He retired in 1972 due to poor health, but said Wednesday his health has been restored.

CAIRN, publisher of Pickwick Publishing Co., said Wednesday he was asked to take the appointment because of his legislative experience and because the large number of applicants for the House seat made a difficult choice for the committeemen.

He also said he had no specific legislative proposals. "I will just work for whatever the people in the district seem to need most," Carroll said.

Carroll served for many years, both in the House and Senate, as chairman of a special investigating committee for the Illinois Public Aid Commission.

In his first term as a representative, when his legislative district extended from Evanston to Elgin, Carroll convened a conference of mayors which evolved into the Northwest Municipal Conference.

BEFORE HIS first election, he served four years as administrative assistant to Lt. Gov. John William Chapman (under Gov. William Stratton).

"They told me it would be for the good of the party, and the Republican Party has been good to me," Carroll said of his return to the legislature.

With at least 16 serious candidates who had hoped for appointment to Juckett's seat, a Republican primary for the 1976 election appears a certainty.

Committeemen who made the appointment included Floyd T. Fulle of Maine Township, who held the majority of the weighted vote; Fred Yonkers of Wheeling Township; Sen. John Nimrod of Niles Township, and William Birmingham of Northfield Township.

Des Plaines in suit against FAA and CAB

Des Plaines will enter into a suit filed by Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott which charges the Civil Aeronautics Board and the Federal Aviation Administration with failing to take positive action to reduce noise at O'Hare Airport.

The city will enter the suit as a party plaintiff against the two agencies in an attempt to emphasize local concern with the noise problem. Other communities bordering the airport have taken similar action.

Ald. Alan Abrams, 8th, chairman of the city code and judiciary committee, said the suit in addition seeks to enjoin the airport from adding any more aircraft which could compound the noise problem.

The council approved the committee recommendation without a dissenting vote, but failed to go along with the committee's recommendation that Robert DiLeonardi, city corporation counsel, handle the case.

BY A VOTE of 10 to 4 the council agreed that the matter should be handled by City Atty. Charles Hug as part of his regular duties. As corporation counsel, DiLeonardi is paid a fee for each matter he handles for the city.

Abrams said DiLeonardi could handle the matter better because he is more familiar with the case than Hug and also is more accustomed to dealing with federal court matters.

"The city attorney has a full-time job which takes up much of his time," Abrams said. "I think Mr. Hug is getting some interesting experience in some of the cases he is handling, but I think the city could be best served in this matter with Mr. DiLeonardi handling it because of his background."

Ald. Gerald Meyer, 7th, disagreed with Abrams saying this case could give Hug some valuable experience.

City tests its authority

Panel to probe apartment demolition

Three men have been appointed by Rolling Meadows Mayor Roland J. Meyer to determine if the city can order the demolition of an apartment building in the Whispering Glen apartment complex destroyed by fire Aug. 29.

The appointees are Joseph K. McGrath, a structural engineer from the Joseph K. McGrath Consulting Engineers, 1301 Kensington Rd., Arlington Heights; W. L. Carroll, an architect from W. L. Carroll and Associates, 24 S. Bothwell St., Palatine, and Fred H. Prather, a self-employed architect with offices at 400 N. Michigan Ave., Chicago.

They have been reviewing city building codes and blueprints of the apartment building at Ill. Rte. 53 and Algonquin Road for which the city is seeking the demolition order.

The members of the panel will visit the apartment building, examine structural damage and determine compliance with city codes, Meyer said.

Meyer was authorized by the city council two weeks ago to make the appointments after the council's building, zoning and public works committee urged approval of a building department recommendation.

THE BUILDING was damaged in a fire Aug. 29 and has stood vacant since. It is owned by Kassuba Corp., which is in federal bankruptcy proceedings, and a sale of the complex to U.S. Managers, Inc., is pending. The Littlestone Co. is managing the complex, and representatives for Littlestone and consulting firms have opposed the demolition request.

Under city ordinances, demolition can be ordered if a panel of experts determines it would cost more than 50 per cent of building value to make repairs. The city staff contends that the cost of making repairs to bring the structure into full compliance with city codes would exceed 50 per cent of the building's value.

Construction consultants for the complex said they feel repairs and code compliance would cost 20 to 25 per cent of the building's value. They said damage was limited to a 63-foot center section of the 200-foot-long building.

City may raise clerk's pay at least $360 a year

A proposal to increase the city clerk's salary in Rolling Meadows from $600 a year to $40 per meeting attended is being considered by city officials.

Under the proposal the clerk would receive $40 for each regular or special city council meeting attended, which would bring the clerk's salary to a minimum of $960 for the regular 24 yearly council meetings alone.

The finance committee this week deferred action on the proposal. Two aldermen, William Ahrens, 2nd, and Daniel Weber, 4th, expressed opposition to the plan.

Both said most of the duties of the elected clerk are delegated to the full-time deputy clerk, making the salary increase unjustified in the opinion of several aldermen.

Some aldermen and City Mgr. James Watson were critical of the amount of the clerk's work now being done by the deputy clerk, but Watson added that state statutes permit the clerk to appoint a deputy clerk and delegate duties to the deputy.

By law, the city clerk is responsible for keeping the city seal, keeping all city records and handling local elections.

The city's present clerk, Eileen Kornatz, is not running for reelection this year. Elizabeth K. Brissenden is running unopposed for the position. The deputy city clerk is Elizabeth Houldsworth.

The salary change would have to be decided by the city council before the new clerk takes office.

2 indicted in backdating of Nixon papers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Watergate grand jury Wednesday indicted an attorney and a document appraiser for their parts in backdating former President Richard M. Nixon's gift of vice presidential papers to the National Archives.

The Nixon's 1969 tax return showed the gift, valued at $367,000, was made March 27, 1969. Actually, the papers granting the gift were signed and notarized April 10, 1970 — well after Congress passed a law sharply cutting back tax benefits for gifts made after July 23, 1969.

The indictment named Los Angeles attorney Frank DeMarco Jr., 49, and Chicago appraiser Ralph G. Newman, 63.

Former White House deputy assistant Edward L. Morgan, who already has pleaded guilty for his part in backdating the gift, was named an unindicted co-conspirator. Morgan was sentenced in December to four months in prison and 20 months probation.

DEMARCO WAS charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States, making false statements to the Internal Revenue Service, and obstructing an inquiry of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

Frank DeMarco Jr.

Ralph G. Newman

Newman was charged with conspiracy to defraud, and with assisting in the preparation of a false document filed with a federal income-tax return.

The court said conviction for conspiracy to defraud and for making false statements to the IRS carry maximum penalties of five years and a $10,000 fine on each count; obstructing a congressional inquiry five years and $5,000; and assisting in preparing a false statement three years and $5,000.

IN A STATEMENT from his Los Angeles law office, DeMarco said he had a "strange feeling of relief" in knowing the matter was about to come to some form of final resolution.

"I have been living under a cloud of doubt for over a year ever since Mr. Nixon's tax troubles first came to light and I welcome the chance to vindicate myself," he said.

"I have done nothing wrong. I have conspired with no one, in my judgment. I have made some mistakes but they were neither intentional nor criminal."

After the IRS ruled against Nixon's deductions, he agreed to pay almost $500,000 in back taxes and interest penalties. He said his personal savings would be "virtually wiped out."

NIXON'S pre-presidential papers were moved to storage facilities under control of the General Services Administration March 26-27, 1969. But this act itself was not claimed to constitute the "gift," the indictment said, adding that DeMarco, Newman and Morgan took various parts in having a Nixon deed actually transferring the material to the government fraudulently backdated to March 27, 1969.

The IRS audit division began a reaudit of the Nixon tax returns Dec. 7, 1973, and continued into 1974. The GSA and the joint congressional committee entered the investigation in 1974 at the request of Nixon.

The indictment said that during these investigations, "the conspirators would conceal and cause the concealment of various documents . . ." and "would destroy and cause the destruction of other such documents."

Newman known for Abe work

Ralph G. Newman, indicted Wednesday in the backdating of former President Richard M. Nixon's vice presidential papers, is a historian most noted for his dissertations on the life and times of Abraham Lincoln and his accounts of the Civil War.

Newman, president of the board of the Chicago Public Library and a private bookseller, served as appraiser for numerous American Presidents and was paid more than $12,000 for the work he did for Nixon.

The papers, Newman said later, were probably worth more than the $576,000 he said they were worth in 1970. He has estimated their revised worth at more than $1 million.

Newman, 63, attended four colleges and received doctor of letters and doctor of laws degrees. He is the founder of the Abraham Lincoln Book Shop Inc. Chicago, owner of the Americana House Publishing Co., and recipient of several awards for his literary work, including several books he authored or edited.

"possibly connect the taxpayer with the preparation of the return" — thus providing the basis for a fraud penalty against Nixon. The question became moot when President Ford pardoned Nixon Sept. 9 for all Watergate-related offenses.

Expansion depends on results

Industrial park workers to be polled on bus service

Elk Grove Village residents who work in the industrial park will be polled to learn if interest exists for a bus service between the residential and industrial area.

Trustee Nancy Vanderweel, chairman of the village transportation committee, said expansion of the current residential bus service will depend on survey results.

Mrs. Vanderweel said an estimated 20 per cent of the industrial park's 30,000 work force lives in the village.

"We need to find out how many of our residents who work in town would use a village bus to the industrial park if it were provided," she said.

The transportation committee is asking residents interested in a bus to the industrial park to fill out the coupon in The Herald and mail it to the village.

"The response will determine if the transportation committee continues its study of providing village bus service to the industrial park," Mrs. Vanderweel said.

"The committee has received requests to expand the dial-a-ride residential service to the industrial area and is interested in providing additional services if its residents demand them."

MRS. VANDERWEEL said initial plans call for industrial bus service similar to the commuter bus now provided in addition to the in-town rides.

People who work in the industrial complex are asked to tell where and when they work. "This will help us determine what the peak demand time is and how many people would use buses if we provided them," she said.

The committee also is interested in hearing from residents who do not now work in the industrial park but would if there was bus service.

Mrs. Vanderweel said the committee wants residents to send in the coupon but also will accept telephone responses. People interested in bus service to the industrial area are asked to call 439-3900.

THE COMMITTEE believes an industrial park bus would make it possible for young people to find jobs in Elk Grove Village.

"We believe a bus service is needed for those who already work in the industrial park and would also open the door to employment for other residents," she said.

Chicago Transit Authority officials are working on plans to begin a charter bus service from Chicago to the industrial park in May. The Elk Grove Assn. of Industry and Commerce negotiated with the CTA for almost a year on plans for the charter bus.

The commuter service would be a charter agreement between the association and CTA and paid entirely by riders' fees.

Initial plans call for running buses from the CTA rapid transit station at Jefferson Park to the industrial park.

Solutions don't come easily, but proposals abound...

by KAREN BLECHIA
Last of a series

If some doctors have their way, an arbitration board would decide how much money you could collect for medical malpractice.

If lawyers have their way, filling a lawsuit still would be the way to get compensation.

Arbitration and continued use of the courts are only two solutions proposed to the crisis caused by the rapid rise in medical malpractice suits and the high cost of malpractice insurance. Proposals include:

• Voluntary or mandatory arbitration. A patient would sign an agreement to submit any malpractice claims to arbitration rather than court. A board of doctors, attorneys and laymen would hear charges and make judgments. Some proposals include setting a $200,000 limit on awards. Some set specific damages which would be awarded each injury.

The Illinois Hospital Assn. and Illinois State Medical Society favor trying out

such a plan that they believe would speed handling of claims and possibly save money. The Chicago and Illinois Bar Associations oppose it because they do not think a patient would get as good a deal before a panel of arbitrators as they would in court.

• No-fault insurance. Physicians or patients would buy insurance under which aggrieved patients could collect for malpractice, based on an injury-damages schedule, without trial and without large lawyers' fees.

Opponents, including insurance companies, say there is no way to define what would be compensable injury under no-fault. Doctors believe the compensation should include medical expenses and loss of wages but not for pain and suffering because they say it is impossible to evaluate.

Proponents say local medical societies could define the injuries they would pay for.

• Establishment of state Commissions

Where patients can go instead of filing lawsuits

Filing suit against a doctor or hospital is not the only way to get results on a medical complaint.

Four hospitals in the Northwest suburbs have patient-relations programs to take care of gripes. People with complaints about their doctors can go to the Chicago Medical Society or the Illinois Dept. of Education and Registration.

"We would prefer that patients come to us before going to court," said Brother Felix Bettendorf, president-chief executive officer at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village. He said patients with complaints can report them to the administration or to the medical director of the hospital.

AT HOLY FAMILY Hospital in Des Plaines, a patient with a complaint can take it to the nurse-in-charge or to one of the nuns assigned to patient relations. If a patient cannot get satisfaction, he can take his complaint to administration.

"If a patient falls or is injured in the hospital he would receive medical care and an X-ray to determine the extent of injury at no charge," said Jim McQuaid, hospital spokesman.

McQuaid and Ann Finney, in charge of patient relations at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, suggest patients with complaints about their doctors talk it over with the doctor first. Mrs. Finney said a patient can file a written complaint with the hospital medical staff.

GRIEVANCES ABOUT physicians are investigated by the Chicago Medical Society, which tries to act as mediator between patient and physician, said Lee Forres, assistant to the executive administrator.

"We do not have any power or authority over doctors," he said. "But about 75 per cent of the time our mediation works."

If a patient with a serious complaint cannot get action, he can take his grievance to the Dept. of Education and Registration, which licenses doctors in Illinois.

On a formal complaint, a hearing would be held before the medical-licensing committee, which has the power to revoke a doctor's license.

Senate suspends tax on oil; veto vowed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate voted Wednesday to suspend the administration's tax on imported oil in a power showdown which apparently killed a key provision of President Ford's energy program.

Ford said immediately he would veto the bill. But administration forces conceded, in advance, there was no hope to sustain the veto in the House and the 66-28 margin by which the Senate approved the suspension appeared to have doomed Ford's hopes of salvaging the tax.

"I regret today's vote by the Senate but do not regard it as final," Ford said in a statement. "I intend to veto this legislation."

"I believe the Congress will ultimately respond to the will of the American people and serve national rather than narrow interests. I will continue to work with Congress to this end."

"I intend to veto this legislation. I could not do otherwise and be faithful to my oath of office."

Democrats and Republicans agreed that the Senate vote on overriding the veto would be close.

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., said before the vote, "If we can muster 30 votes today, then there is a good chance the President's veto can be sustained."

But the administration fell two votes short and there appeared to be virtually no chance to switch the votes needed to sustain the veto.

The Senate approved the suspension, passed earlier by the House, after rejecting Republican moves to allow some of the tax to remain in effect.

By executive order, Ford imposed a $1 a barrel tax on imported oil Feb. 1 which would climb to $3 a barrel April 1.

The three-tier tax was imposed in an effort to drive down consumption of oil products, especially gasoline.

In other economic matters:

Americans earned less money in January, the government said Wednesday, and Chrysler Corp.'s shareholders were told they would not get a dividend for the first time since the Great Depression.

In Washington, Henry Ford II, chairman of Ford Motor Co., and Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Auto Workers, warned of even harder times ahead.

The Commerce Department reported that American wage earners' pay decreased in January for the third consecutive month and farmers' income dropped for the fourth month in a row.

At the same time, total personal income, including wages, retirement and welfare benefits, interest payments, and rent, rose an unusually low 0.2 per cent. In December, overall personal income was up 0.5 per cent.

The administration is counting on an increase in personal incomes to encourage consumer spending to help spur the economy.

In New York, Chrysler's board of directors omitted paying a regular quarterly dividend for the first time since 1933. Earlier, General Motors reduced dividends to 60 cents from 65 cents, and American Motors omitted paying. Ford had not yet reported earnings or its dividend plans.

"In my 30 years as a businessman, I have never before felt so uncertain and so troubled about the future of both my country and my company," Henry Ford told Congress' Joint Economic Committee.

Woodcock, who also appeared before the committee, and Ford urged government to turn its attention to reducing manufacturing unemployment. More than 200,000 autoworkers have been laid off indefinitely in the recession.

Woodcock, calling President Ford's economic-energy package "tardy and inadequate," said unemployment may rise to 9.10 per cent unless something is done immediately.

And in the news Wednesday:

The House Ways and Means Committee gave final approval to a $21.3 billion measure to rebate up to $200 to every taxpayer this year and further cut taxes in 1975. But when committee members again turned back liberal efforts to attach an amendment ending the oil depletion allowance, it meant that fight over the loophole could delay House action on the tax cut bill.

News that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger returned with some new Middle East peace proposals sparked a rally on the New York Stock Exchange. The Dow Jones average finished up 5.69 points at 738.39. Standard & Poor's index increased 0.51 to 81.44. The average price of an NYSE common share increased by 14 cents. Declines edged advances, 711 to 687, among the 1,808 issues traded.

The Federal Reserve in New York has poured billions of dollars into the economy in recent months to fight recession, but the nation's money supply actually has declined, according to government figures. The supply fell 6 per cent in the last three months because consumers and businesses are saving instead of spending, the Fed says.

Rocky: face it, we're in tough times

VICE PRESIDENT Nelson Rockefeller, unaware of all it is doing — has led to a growing sense of frustration among Americans.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller warned Wednesday there is no quick cure for the nation's economic ailments, even if Congress acts quickly on President Ford's program.

Speaking in the morning to business men and later to the nation's governors, Rockefeller said the nation must go through a period of belt tightening, and Congress must overhaul many costly programs before the economy can be turned around.

"Face it, we're in tough times," Rockefeller said. "It's going to take time, it's not going to happen overnight."

"For too long Congress has been passing legislation with wonderful objectives without realizing the long term implications," he said. He added that even if Congress acted quickly on Ford's economic program, or adopted one of its own, it would not bring a rapid end to inflation, recession and unemployment.

Later he told the National Governors Conference that big, costly, overlapping government — unaware of all it is doing — has led to a growing sense of frustration among Americans.

One of the reasons he resigned as governor of New York State last year, Rockefeller said, was that "less and less was I able to be responsive to my own constituency both in terms of decision-making and the operations of government."

Kissinger reports peace progress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, returning from a 10-day Middle East mission, said Wednesday he had made progress toward a "framework" for peace and promised close contact with the Soviet Union as negotiations continue.

Before reporting the results of his shuttle diplomacy to President Ford, Kissinger said, "I believe we have made some progress towards establishing a framework for negotiations in the Middle East and I plan to return there in a few

And, he told reporters at the airport, "We will stay in close contact with the Soviet leaders as we negotiate another step in the Middle East and also in the preparation of a final settlement" of differences between Israel and the Arab nations.

Kissinger also planned to report good progress toward a common strategy on energy with America's major European allies including France, his last stop on a nine-nation mission which took him 15,335 miles in 10 days.

A senior official aboard Kissinger's plane said the secretary had been in almost daily contact with the principal Middle East leaders ever since leaving the area on Saturday. The official said Kissinger's exploratory mission "pretty well clarified the range" in which an agreement must be found on a further withdrawal east of the Suez Canal.

Next month's trip will be the crucial

one for his step-by-step diplomacy and officials described the negotiations as "tickleish."

Statements from both Israel and Egypt since Kissinger left showed a softening in the previously hard public positions by both sides, but there were warning signs that Syria is lobbying the other Arab states in opposition to a new Egyptian-Israeli accord.

From Israel, Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Mordechai Gur said an agreement with Egypt was even more important than keeping the strategic Mitla and Gidi passes in the Sinai desert. The passes and the Abu Rudis oilfields are the key to the agreement.

From Egypt, President Anwar Sadat suggested that the United States stand as guarantor of an Arab pledge not to attack Israel while the search for peace continues.

Even the reports that President Hafez Assad is trying to raise support against the agreement only reflected the impression of some progress that Kissinger mentioned on his arrival.

U.S. evacuating Americans from Asmara

ADDIS ABABA (UPI) — The United States is evacuating the last of its nationals from the Eritrean capital of Asmara, fearing the situation may deteriorate further and lead to reprisals against Americans, diplomatic sources said Wednesday.

The sources said small groups of Americans have been evacuated from the war-torn provincial capital in northern Ethiopia in the past week until now there are "less than 30 Americans left in the city."

These are mainly consular officials with a scattering of businessmen and Department of defense contract workers. When fighting broke out in Asmara Jan. 31 there were more than 300 Americans and their dependents living in the Eritrean capital.

More clashes were reported inside Asmara during the day, following heavy attacks by rebel infiltrators against government installations during the night. Diplomatic sources said the guerrillas had inflicted heavy casualties on a 600-man convoy of government regulars north of the city.

The decision to evacuate virtually all the Americans was taken because Washington feared the fighting between Eritrean secessionist rebels and government troops would escalate and Americans might eventually become targets in the conflict.

Thus far no Americans have been wounded or killed in the fighting, but Ethiopia has asked Washington for an emergency airlift of about $25 million worth of small arms and ammunition to continue the conflict against the guerrillas.

The U.S. government is apparently fearful that if the request is granted — and this may be decided this weekend at a special meeting in Washington — the remaining Americans in Asmara could become the revenge targets of the rebels who are able to infiltrate the city at will.

According to sources here the Americans have left only a "few watchmen" at a formerly important communications station in Asmara and other installations and have evacuated the rest of the technicians.

From Egypt, President Anwar Sadat suggested that the United States stand as guarantor of an Arab pledge not to attack Israel while the search for peace continues.

Even the reports that President Hafez Assad is trying to raise support against the agreement only reflected the impression of some progress that Kissinger mentioned on his arrival.

Panel to probe all intelligence units

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House established a special committee Wednesday to investigate all government intelligence agencies, including the CIA.

On a 286-120 vote, the House established a Select Committee on Intelligence to be composed of seven Democrats and three Republicans, disregarding GOP charges the committee membership was stacked against them.

Earlier, the House defeated by a 258-141 vote an amendment by Rep. John B. Anderson, R-Ill., that would have provided equal party representation.

The Democrats also refused a last-minute appeal by Rep. Mildred Fenwick, R-N.Y., for Speaker Carl Albert to appoint four Republicans instead of three. She contended the move "would convince the people of the nation that we can rise above party, that we are seeking the truth."

The committee's composition as finally adopted almost exactly reflected the party division in the House as a whole.

Earlier, House Republicans had charged the Democrats with trying to create "a stacked deck" aimed at limiting the investigation only to intelligence operations under the Nixon administration.

"We don't want a stacked deck," said Rep. Barber B. Conable, R-N.Y., chairman of the Republican Policy Committee. He said the scope of the investigation should extend back to at least the Johnson administration.

The measure in its final form set no limits on how far back the committee may probe, but neither did it stipulate how far back its investigations must go.

Albert promptly appointed Rep. Lucien N. Nedzi, D-Mich., chairman of the committee — the third special panel named in recent weeks to investigate the CIA.

• Six-year-old Joey Schillaci beat cancer. Now he wants to beat his pal, Gary Anderson, at ice hockey. Joey recently made his last trip to Mott Children's Hospital in Ann Arbor and was tested for any remaining traces of neuroblastoma, a usually fatal form of cancer found only in children. He was pronounced cured and they call him a "miracle child." In 1969, when Joey — son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schillaci — was stricken, doctors operated and told the boy's parents the child's bones and liver had been affected and he wouldn't last the year. Ex-legislator Carroll to succeed Juckett

John W. (Bill) Carroll of Park Ridge, who served 16 years in the Illinois General Assembly before his retirement in 1972, has been named interim successor to Rep. Robert S. Juckett, R-Park Ridge, who died Feb. 2.

Carroll, 67, said Wednesday he will serve on Juckett's unexpired 4th District term and will not seek a full term in 1976.

The four Republican township committeemen responsible for appointing Juckett's successor said they will name a nine-member committee to select a GOP candidate for the seat in 1976. Candidates must file petitions for nomination by mid-December of this year.

Carroll was elected to the House of Representatives in 1958. After 10 years in the House, he was elected to the Senate where he served six years. He retired in 1972 due to poor health, but said Wednesday his health has been restored.

CARROLL, publisher of Pickwick Publishing Co., said Wednesday he was asked to take the appointment because of his legislative experience and because the large number of applicants for the House seat made a difficult choice for the committeemen.

He also said he had no specific legislative proposals. "I will just work for whatever the people in the district seem to need most," Carroll said.

Carroll served for many years, both in the House and Senate, as chairman of a special investigating committee for the Illinois Public Aid Commission.

In his first term as a representative, when his legislative district extended from Evanston to Elgin, Carroll convened a conference of mayors which evolved into the Northwest Municipal Conference.

BEFORE HIS first election, he served four years as administrative assistant to Lt. Gov. John William Chapman (under Gov. William Stratton).

"They told me it would be for the good of the party, and the Republican Party has been good to me," Carroll said of his return to the legislature.

With at least 16 serious candidates who had hoped for appointment to Juckett's seat, a Republican primary for the 1976 election appears a certainty.

Committeemen who made the appointment included Floyd T. Fulle of Maine Township, who held the majority of the weighted vote; Fremd Yonkers of Wheeling Township; Sen. John Nimrod of Niles Township, and William Bingham of Northfield Township.

Dealings with 2nd troubled firm told

by PAT GERLACH

A second case of questionable financial dealings between the Schaumburg State Bank and a company that received bank loans while heading into financial difficulties has come to light.

The four loans, totaling $25,500, were made in 1972 and 1973 to Hedges Manufacturing Co., Forest Park. Three of the loans came at a time when the bank controlled the company as trustee of a trust formed by the firm's late owner.

The fourth was made after the trust sold its stock in the company and bank officials acknowledged in court documents that Hedges was in serious financial trouble, court records show.

Operations of the company by the bank led to charges of mismanagement in a lawsuit filed by beneficiaries of the trust. Settlement of the suit has cost bank stockholders more than $163,000, reducing the bank's 1973 net income by 60 per cent, the annual report of the bank has disclosed.

ONE OF THE ORIGINAL defendants in the suit was Ward Weaver, then president of the bank, who joined the Hedges board of directors after the bank as trustee took control of the company.

Weaver's purchase of a Schaumburg business that had gone heavily into debt at the bank came under scrutiny of a federal grand jury in 1973. The company, Suburban Aquatics Inc., later went bankrupt. No action was taken by the grand jury and Weaver denied any wrongdoing.

The Hedges stock was included in the estate of Alice Blide, company president who died in 1970. Beneficiaries of the Schaumburg State Bank trust, which held 95 per cent of the stock, were Mrs. Blide's daughters, Nancy Janzen of Chicago and Bonnie Ellis of Battle Creek, Mich.

The remaining five per cent of the stock was owned by their cousin, Harry Hedberg of North Riverside, who was vice president of the company.

Weaver and William Kaiser Jr., a bank director and executor of Mrs. Blide's estate, were appointed to the Hedges board of directors after Mrs. Blide's death "in order to find out what was going on and to represent the bank's interest," Weaver said in a recent interview.

BY 1972, THE company was in financial difficulty. The bank made loans to Hedges in January and in August, court records show. In September the sisters filed suit against the bank, charging that bank officials mismanaged the company.

They asked $200,000 damages, charging that losses for 1972 were in excess of $100,000 and represented more than 50 per cent of the company's net worth. They charged this was the company's first loss since its founding in 1949.

Also named as defendants in the suit were Kaiser and Weaver, although Weaver was later dropped from the case through an agreement between the plaintiffs and defendants.

Records indicate that Kaiser, in turn, later filed suit against Hedberg, charging he diverted business from the company through unfair business practices. Hedberg has since opened an office equipment manufacturing company in Broadview.

THE BANK MADE another loan to Hedges in November. In January 1973 it was given court permission to sell the trust's Hedges stock after bank officials told the court that Hedges "has been steadily losing money and is without sufficient working capital to continue to meet its payroll and obligations."

The sale was made to Richard Moellering, 333 S. Lincoln Ln., Arlington Heights. The sisters later charged that the bank officials unloaded the stock to Moellering for $70,000, less than the $200,000 value put on the stock by the Internal Revenue Service after Mrs. Blide's death.

Court records show a fourth Schaumburg State Bank loan to Hedges in March 1973.

In July, Moellering filed for reorganization of the company under federal bankruptcy statutes. The company listed assets of $297,000 and liabilities of $334,000. Schaumburg State Bank is among the firm's major creditors, with most of its $25,000 in loans still due.

Moellering has declined to comment about the company, which has been moved to Woodstock, Ill.

WEAVER, found innocent last year of federal charges of conspiracy and bank fraud, is no longer an officer or director of the bank. He said he is a real estate consultant to Brandel Enterprises, owned by Paul W. Brandel, president of Schaumburg State Bank.

Weaver refused to discuss the bank loans to Hedges, explaining "that's bank business and, as such, confidential."

He said the bank agreed to an out-of-court settlement in December 1974 "because the legal fees were getting so high," but added that throughout most of the two years of litigation, "we thought we had a good chance to win the suit."

Weaver had been indicted by a federal grand jury in May 1972 on charges of making false entries in bank records. He was found innocent of all charges during a trial last year.

LEMONIE STITT, an Arlington Heights attorney who represented the bank in the suit, said some of the money obtained through the loans was used by Hedges as working capital.

"I wouldn't say the bank was lending money to itself, though, because the corporation is distinctly separate from the trust," Stitt said, adding that the loans were approved by the bank's loan committee.

Stitt said there is no similarity between the Hedges situation and that of Suburban Aquatics, a wholesale tropical fish firm that accumulated substantial debts at Schaumburg State Bank and was then purchased by Weaver.

At a time when the company owed the bank about $16,000, Weaver bought the firm for $7,000 but the check was immediately turned back to the bank as payment for some of the debts.

Weaver later took in several partners, one of whom eventually took over sole ownership of Suburban Aquatics because he objected to the company's mounting debts. The company filed for bankruptcy in October 1973. The bank was not listed among its creditors.

Hike in students doesn't materialize

by BOB GALLAS
Boundary changes made in expectation of a flood of children at three schools in Des Plaines and Mount Prospect apparently were unnecessary and have cost Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 more than $20,000 in extra teacher salaries and building expenses.

The changes were made in the boundaries of Brentwood and High Ridge Knolls schools in Des Plaines and John Jay School in Mount Prospect because 85 children were expected to move into three Mount Prospect apartment complexes this year.

The citizens' boundary committee estimated 56 children would eventually attend Brentwood from the Crystal Towers and Forest Cove apartment complexes. They estimated 26 would come from Laurel Estates apartments to High Ridge Knolls.

Two men arrested in industrial park

Elk Grove Village police arrested two men in the industrial park Tuesday and charged them with possession of burglary tools.

John Rooney, 21, of 922 Prospect Manor, Mount Prospect, and Ronald Sammarco, 21, of 1840 Parkside St., Park Ridge, are being held in DuPage County Jail unable to post $2,000 bond each. They both face the charge of possession of burglary tools and must appear in the Wheaton branch of DuPage County Circuit Court Saturday.

Police said the two were arrested on American Lane when an Elk Grove Village policeman became suspicious of their actions. A search of their auto revealed the burglary tools, police said.

Harper trustees slate meeting in Elk Grove

The Harper College board of trustees will be in Elk Grove Village tonight to answer questions about the school.

The board will conduct the fourth in its series of meetings in area communities at 7:30 p.m. at the Bank of Elk Grove, 100 E. Higgins Rd. At previous meetings in Arlington Heights, Mount Prospect and Wheeling the board has answered questions about plans for a second campus for the school, curriculum programs and other issues.

Invitations to the meeting have been sent to various civic organizations. The meeting also is open to the public.

Des Plaines joins jet-noise suit

Des Plaines will enter into a suit filed by Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott which charges the Civil Aeronautics Board and the Federal Aviation Administration with failing to take positive action to reduce noise at O'Hare Airport.

The city will enter the suit as a party plaintiff against the two agencies in an attempt to emphasize local concern with the noise problem. Other communities bordering the airport have taken similar action.

Ald. Alan Abrams, 8th, chairman of

BUT WITH Crystal Towers about half built and Forest Cove nearing completion, Brentwood School has received only three students and it is estimated only 10, rather than 56, will attend when the units are completed later this year.

Construction problems have delayed Laurel Estates and that complex has no residents. So High Ridge Knolls has none of the estimated 29 projected to come from that complex.

Meanwhile, each building was assigned one extra teacher this year in anticipation of an influx of students. Salaries for the two extra teachers is estimated at $20,000.

Board member Judy Zanca has charged the whole boundary question, which caused bitter feelings on the part of Des Plaines residents in the two school areas, was a "smokescreen" engineered by former Supt. James Erviti to duck other issues.

Erviti, whose forced resignation was accepted in December, was in the midst of negotiating a settlement of his contract with the board in August. Mrs. Zanca, who consistently opposed the boundary changes, said the changes were not necessary but were a diversion to take the heat off the controversy swirling around Erviti.

OTHER SOURCES in the district have confirmed Mrs. Zanca's assertion that Erviti wanted to take the heat off himself with another issue.

Opponents to the boundary changes wanted to wait and see what enrollment would come from the apartments.

Disheartened by the failure of their projections to come true and the controversy that engulfed their committee, members of the boundary committee are at a loss to explain what happened.

"The whole thing just turned into a fiasco," said Nita Stannin, committee chairman.

A great deal of confusion on the committee resulted over what multiplier would be used to determine how many children would move into the complex, she said. The multiplier is a factor used to determine the number of children expected to come from the apartments.

"If any committee is formed to study those boundaries again, they'd better take a long look at that multiplier," said committee member Marilyn Magsamen. "Let's face it, we blew it."

Committee member Erwin Poklacki said he intends to get the boundaries changed back to the old boundaries. "That's ridiculous," said Poklacki when informed of how his committee's predictions have turned out.

Panel grants accreditation to Alexian medical center

Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village recently received accreditation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals.

The accreditation, not required by law, is valid for two years and based on a survey of the local hospital conducted last fall by two field representatives of the commission.

Alexian Brothers is one of about 5,300

general hospitals to earn the commission accreditation this year of the 7,400 hospitals in the nation.

The voluntary survey indicates the medical center has chosen to operate under standards set by the commission, a hospital spokesman said.

THE GUIDELINES for accreditation by the commission cover nursing, dietary, pharmaceutical, laboratory, radiology, emergency and social services. The commission also requires application of certain principles of organization and administration of services and the hospital must meet fire-safety and construction requirements.

An accredited hospital must have a governing body responsible to the patients of the hospital and the surrounding community. Also the chief executive officer must be skilled and qualified to direct the hospital's activities and the medical staff must meet the highest professional, legal and ethical standards.

The commission was set up in 1918 under the auspices of the American College of Surgeons. A Chicago-based, not-for-profit organization, it was incorporated in 1951 with the support of its present member organizations, including the American College of Surgeons, the American College of Physicians, the American Hospital Assn. and the American Medical Assn.

More fun activities planned

Add antique auto show to Bicentennial celebration

The Elk Grove Village Horizons 76 committee has added several events to next year's program to celebrate the nation's Bicentennial and the 20th birthday of the village.

Committee members this week scheduled the following new events:

• A beard-and mustache-growing contest.

• A film and lecture series, trade fair and open house at several municipal buildings and the Farmhouse, operated by the Elk Grove and Schaumburg townships Mental Health Center.

• Antique auto show, musical reviews, children's fine arts performances and an heirloom display and costume-heritage party.

Other new events include a period fashion show, a president's ball, fishing contests, kids' day and penny carnival.

A village-distributed 1976 calendar will advertise each event planned by citizens groups, clubs or businesses. The deadline for inclusion in the calendar is August.

Groups interested in holding an event but needing ideas can contact Trustee Nancy Vanderweel, chairman of the committee. She said the committee has several ideas for events and many dates open for reservation.

Mrs. Vanderweel also is seeking photographs of Elk Grove Village taken since its incorporation in 1856 to be displayed in the municipal building.

There've been some changes made.

2 indicted in backdating of Nixon papers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Watergate grand jury Wednesday indicted an attorney and a document appraiser for their parts in backdating former President Richard M. Nixon's vice presidential papers to the National Archives.

The Nixon's 1969 tax return showed the gift, valued at $367,000, was made March 27, 1969. Actually, the papers granting the gift were signed and notarized April 10, 1970, well after Congress passed a law sharply cutting back tax benefits for gifts made after July 25, 1969.

The indictment named Los Angeles attorney Frank DeMarco Jr., 49, and Chicago appraiser Ralph G. Newman, 63.

Former White House deputy assistant Edward L. Morgan, who already has pleaded guilty for his part in backdating the gift, was named an unindicted co-conspirator. Morgan was sentenced in December to four months in prison and 20 months probation.

DeMARCO WAS charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States, making false statements to the Internal Revenue Service, and obstructing an inquiry of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

Frank DeMarco Jr.

Ralph G. Newman

Newman was charged with conspiracy to defraud, and with assisting in the preparation of a false document filed with a federal income-tax return.

The court said conviction for conspiracy to defraud and for making false statements to the IRS carry maximum penalties of five years and a $10,000 fine on each count; obstructing a congressional inquiry five years and $5,000; and assisting in preparing a false statement three years and $5,000.

IN A STATEMENT from his Los Angeles law office, DeMarco said he had a "strange feeling of relief" in knowing the matter was about to come to some form of final resolution.

"I have been living under a cloud of doubt for over a year ever since Mr. Nixon's tax troubles first came to light and I welcome the chance to vindicate myself," he said.

"I have done nothing wrong. I have conspired with no one, in my judgment. I have made some mistakes but they were neither intentional nor criminal."

After the IRS ruled against Nixon's deductions, he agreed to pay almost $500,000 in back taxes and interest penalties. He said his personal savings would be "virtually wiped out."

NIXON'S pre-presidential papers were moved to storage facilities under control of the General Services Administration March 26-27, 1969. But this act itself was not claimed to constitute the "gift," the indictment said, adding that DeMarco, Newman and Morgan took various parts in having a Nixon deed actually transferring the material to the government fraudulently backdated to March 27, 1969.

The IRS audit division began a readout of the Nixon tax returns Dec. 7, 1973, and continued into 1974. The GSA and the joint congressional committee entered the investigation in 1974 at the request of Nixon.

The indictment said that during these investigations, "the conspirators would conceal and cause the concealment of various documents . . ." and "would destroy and cause the destruction of other such documents."

Newman known for Abe work

Ralph G. Newman, indicted Wednesday in the backdating of former President Richard M. Nixon's vice presidential papers, is a historian most noted for his dissertations on the life and times of Abraham Lincoln and his accounts of the Civil War.

Newman, president of the board of the Chicago Public Library and a private bookseller, served as appraiser for numerous American Presidents and was paid more than $12,000 for the work he did for Nixon.

The papers, Newman said later, were probably worth more than the $376,000 he said they were worth in 1970. He has estimated their revised worth at more than $1 million.

Newman, 63, attended four colleges and received doctor of letters and doctor of laws degrees. He is the founder of the Abraham Lincoln Book Shop Inc., Chicago, owner of the Americana House Publishing Co., and recipient of several awards for his literary work, including several books he authored or edited.

"possibly connect the taxpayer with the preparation of the return" — thus providing the basis for a fraud penalty against Nixon. The question became moot when President Ford pardoned Nixon Sept. 9 for all Watergate-related offenses.

During the government's study of the claimed deduction, IRS investigators urged a grand jury be impaneled to investigate DeMarco, Newman and Morgan.

The investigators said if Nixon's aides could be compelled to testify, they could

Carl Jansen sidetracked officials when he filed objections against SUP candidates

by PAT GERLACH

Who is this Carl Jansen? It is a question that Schaumburg officials, political leaders and people from all parts of town have been asking since last Friday.

Jansen is a 31-year-old mortgage banker living in the Sheffield Park subdivision who brought Schaumburg officials up short last week when he filed an objection to candidates supported by the incumbent political party in the April election. His action will bring about the first electoral board hearing in the 20-year history of the community.

As a result of his questioning of the petitions of the established Schaumburg United Party, officials of that party have been spending more time this week defending their position than campaigning for office. Press releases have been issued defending their candidates and blasting Jansen.

SOON AFTER JANSEN objected to the SUP filing, SUP members filed an objection of their own against the opposition party — the Schaumburg Citizens for Planned Progress "to protect ourselves," they said.

Jansen is taking it all in stride. He says he has "no political interest" in the village and says he does not belong to either local party, though he is a registered Republican, but not a member of the township Republican organization.

Jansen's wife, Barbara, also says she has no political affiliation in Schaumburg, though she signed nominating petitions for Schaumburg Citizens for Planned Progress, opponents of the group her husband has challenged.

Mrs. Jansen said she signed the petitions as a "favor" to friends and neighbors who support SCOPP and "wanted to get enough signatures to get their candidates' names on the ballot.

Two judges, Atcher on electoral board

Two Circuit Court judges will sit on Schaumburg's electoral board with Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher Friday to rule on objections to both political parties involved in the April 15 village election.

Judges Helen F. McGillieuddy and Paul Edward will replace Clerk Sandy Carsello and Trustee Raymond Kessel who are candidates in the spring election and ineligible to serve on the panel. The board will meet at 2 p.m. in Room 1707 of Chicago's Civic Center.

Under state law, the electoral board is forced to meet to decide challenges filed last week against Schaumburg United Party and Schaumburg Citizens for Planned Progress. The panel has the authority to rule candidates off the village election ballot.

"But the person who asked me to sign the petition made it clear that putting down my name in no way meant I had to vote for these candidates," she said.

Jansen has stressed repeatedly since

COMMUNITY BLOOD Chairman Mary Nagy finds Schaumburg High School seniors avid listeners in describing the local blood replacement program. Mrs.

Nagy views the youths as a wide new field of donors since recent changes in state law now permit 17-year-olds to donate blood without parental consent.

Students' gift to village — their blood

by PAT GERLACH

Senior-class gifts generally are a donation to the high school — a community service board to advertise school events, lights for the football field or a display case for the library.

But some Schaumburg High School students this year are considering giving a more personal donation — blood.

Pat Scala, a senior at Schaumburg, is trying to convince eligible seniors to band together to donate blood as a class gift to their school and the community.

"Usually, the senior class gift is something that the school just hangs up to gather dust, but we'd like to do something different — something meaningful," she said.

PAT IS HOPING at least 20 per cent of the more than 500-member senior class will agree to donate blood either this week or at the April village drawing.

The decision is expected at a meeting of the entire class this week, Pat said.

The donation is made possible by a recent change in Illinois law reducing the minimum age of blood donors from 18 years to 17.

Pat Scala's interest in the blood program and health related topics comes naturally because her father, Edward, has been president of Schaumburg's board of health for many years.

"But, I really got interested in the blood program when Mary Nagy, the blood chairman, came to talk to our class committee," she said, adding most of the committee members are "all en-

Solutions don't come easily, but proposals abound...

by KAREN BLECHA

Last of a series

If some doctors have their way, an arbitration board would decide how much money you could collect for medical malpractice.

If lawyers have their way, filing a lawsuit still would be the way to get compensation.

Arbitration and continued use of the courts are only two solutions proposed to the crisis caused by the rapid rise in medical malpractice suits and the high cost of malpractice insurance. Proposals include:

• Voluntary or mandatory arbitration. A patient would sign an agreement to submit any malpractice claims to arbitration rather than court. A board of doctors, attorneys and laymen would hear charges and make judgments. Some proposals include: setting a $200,000 limit on awards. Some set specific damages which would be awarded each injury.

The Illinois Hospital Assn. and Illinois State Medical Society favor trying out

such a plan that they believe would speed handling of claims and possibly save money. The Chicago and Illinois Bar Associations oppose it because they do not think a patient would get as good a deal before a panel of arbitrators as they would in court.

• No-fault insurance. Physicians or patients would buy insurance under which aggrieved patients could collect for malpractice, based on an injury-damages schedule, without trial and without large lawyers' fees.

Opponents, including insurance companies, say there is no way to define what would be compensable injury under no-fault. Doctors believe the compensation should include medical expenses and loss of wages but none for pain and suffering because they say it is impossible to evaluate.

Proponents say local medical societies could define the injuries they would pay for.

• Establishment of state Commissions

Filing suit against a doctor or hospital is not the only way to get results on a medical complaint.

Four hospitals in the Northwest suburbs have patient-relations programs to take care of gripes. People with complaints about their doctors can go to the Chicago Medical Society or the Illinois Dept. of Education and Registration.

"We would prefer that patients come to us before going to court," said Brother Felix Bettendorf, president-chief executive officer at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village. He said patients with complaints can report them to the administration or to the medical director of the hospital.

AT HOLY FAMILY Hospital in Des Plaines, a patient with a complaint can take it to the nurse-in-charge or to one of the nuns assigned to patient relations. If a patient cannot get satisfaction, he can take his complaint to administration.

"If a patient falls or is injured in the hospital he would receive medical care and an X-ray to determine the extent of injury at no charge," said Jim McQuaid, hospital spokesman.

McQuaid and Ann Finney, in charge of patient relations at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, suggest patients with complaints about their doctors talk it over with the doctor first. Mrs. Finney said a patient can file a written complaint with the hospital medical staff.

GRIVANCES ABOUT physicians are investigated by the Chicago Medical Society, which tries to act as mediator between patient and physician, said Lee Forre, assistant to the executive administrator.

"We do not have any power or authority over doctors," he said. "But about 75 per cent of the time our mediation works."

If a patient with a serious complaint cannot get action, he can take his grievance to the Dept. of Education and Registration, which licenses doctors in Illinois.

On a formal complaint, a hearing would be held before the medical-licensing committee, which has the power to revoke a doctor's license.

Objections take SUP by surprise

Friday that he is acting "independently."

HE SAID HE decided to file the objection after reading in The Herald that the established Schaumburg United Party had filed nominating petitions Feb. 10, the deadline for new party filing and after the deadline for an established party. SUP leaders say they obtained incorrect information from the Illinois Board of Elections concerning their status as an established party. Michael Lavellet, director of the state elections board, has accepted partial blame for the error.

"This is not a personal attack on any person or party," Jansen said, explaining he feels the "questionable" filing must be resolved.

Jansen said his job with a real estate broker has involved him in mortgage arrangements for several recent "problem" housing projects, two of which are in Schaumburg.

He believes this experience has made him more aware of village government, though he said he is now not "at liberty" to discuss either project.

THOUGH HIS WORK schedule calls for a trip this week, Jansen said he plans to "make every effort" to attend the electoral board hearing, but confided "it is extremely difficult" to obtain an attorney to represent him at the hearing.

"Everybody I know is afraid to come out to Schaumburg for a hearing, because most of these lawyers represent local developers," he said, noting that many attorneys have expressed "concern about possible retaliation" from zoning board or village officials.

But Jansen is firm in the belief that his challenge was necessary. "If you don't raise an objection, you lose your right to do it forever," he said.

Schaumburg bank dealings with 2nd troubled firm told

by PAT GERLACH

A second case of questionable financial dealings between the Schaumburg State Bank and a company that received bank loans while heading into financial difficulties has come to light.

The four loans, totaling $25,500, were made in 1972 and 1973 to Hedges Manufacturing Co., Forest Park. Three of the loans came at a time when the bank controlled the company as trustee of a trust formed by the firm's late owner.

The fourth was made after the trust sold its stock in the company and bank officials acknowledged in court documents that Hedges was in serious financial trouble, court records show.

Operations of the company by the bank led to charges of mismanagement in a lawsuit filed by beneficiaries of the trust. Settlement of the suit has cost bank stockholders more than $163,000, reducing the bank's 1974 net income by 60 percent, the annual report of the bank has disclosed.

ONE OF THE ORIGINAL defendants in the suit was Ward Weaver, then president of the bank, who joined the Hedges board of directors after the bank as trustee took control of the company.

Weaver's purchase of a Schaumburg business that had gone heavily into debt at the bank came under scrutiny of a federal grand jury in 1973. The company, Suburban Aquatics Inc., later went bankrupt. No action was taken by the grand jury and Weaver denied any wrongdoing.

The Hedges stock was included in the estate of Alice Blide, company president who died in 1970. Beneficiaries of the Schaumburg State Bank trust, which held 95 percent of the stock, were Mrs. Blide's daughters, Nancy Janzen of Chicago and Bonnie Ellis of Battle Creek, Mich.

The remaining five percent of the stock was owned by their cousin, Harry Hedberg of North Riverside, who was vice president of the company.

Weaver and William Kaiser Jr., a bank director and executor of Mrs. Blide's estate, were appointed to the Hedges board of directors after Mrs. Blide's death "in order to find out what was going on and to represent the bank's interest," Weaver said in a recent interview.

BY 1972, THE company was in financial difficulty. The bank made loans to Hedges in January and in August, court records show. In September the sisters filed suit against the bank, charging that bank officials mismanaged the company.

They asked $200,000 damages, charging that losses for 1972 were in excess of $100,000 and represented more than 50 percent of the company's net worth. They charged this was the company's first loss since its founding in 1949.

Also named as defendants in the suit were Kaiser and Weaver, although Weaver was later dropped from the case through an agreement between the plaintiffs and defendants.

Records indicate that Kaiser, in turn, later filed suit against Hedberg, charging he diverted business from the company through unfair business practices. Hedberg has since opened an office equipment manufacturing company in Broadview.

THE BANK MADE another loan to Hedges in November. In January 1973 it was given court permission to sell the trust's Hedges stock after bank officials told the court that Hedges "has been steadily losing money and is without sufficient working capital to continue to meet its payroll and obligations."

The sale was made to Richard Moellering, 355 S Lincoln Ln., Arlington Heights. The sisters later charged that the bank officials unloaded the stock to Moeller for $70,000, less than the $203,000 value put on the stock by the Internal Revenue Service after Mrs. Blide's death.

Court records show a fourth Schaumburg State Bank loan to Hedges in March 1973.

In July, Moeller filed for reorganization of the company under federal bankruptcy statutes. The company listed assets of $297,000 and liabilities of $334,000. Schaumburg State Bank is among the firm's major creditors, with most of its $25,000 in loans still due.

Moeller has declined to comment about the company, which has been moved to Woodstock, Ill.

WEAVER, found innocent last year of federal charges of conspiracy and bank fraud, is no longer an officer or director of the bank. He said he is a real estate consultant to Brandel Enterprises, owned by Paul W. Brandel, president of Schaumburg State Bank.

Weaver refused to discuss the bank loans to Hedges, explaining "that's bank business and, as such, confidential."

He said the bank agreed to an out-of-court settlement in December 1973, "because the legal fees were getting so high," but added that throughout most of the two years of litigation, "we thought we had a good chance to win the suit." Weaver had been indicted by a federal grand jury in May 1972 on charges of making false entries in bank records. He was found innocent of all charges during a trial last year.

LEMOINE STITT, an Arlington Heights attorney who represented the bank in the suit, said some of the money obtained through the loans was used by Hedges as working capital.

"I wouldn't say the bank was lending money to itself, though, because the corporation is distinctly separate from the trust," Stitt said, adding that the loans were approved by the bank's loan committee.

Stitt said there is no similarity between the Hedges situation and that of Suburban Aquatics, a wholesale tropical fish firm that accumulated substantial debts at Schaumburg State Bank and was then purchased by Weaver.

At a time when the company owed the bank about $16,000, Weaver bought the firm for $7,000 but the check was immediately turned back to the bank as payment for some of the debts.

Weaver later took in several partners, one of whom eventually took over sole ownership of Suburban Aquatics because he objected to the company's mounting debts. The company filed for bankruptcy in October 1973. The bank was not listed among its creditors.

Numbers always increasing

Helping the troubled teen

by TONI GINNETTI

(Second of a series)

He is 16 years old. The kids in his crowd have started experimenting with drugs, and though he really doesn't want to get involved, he also doesn't want to be ridiculed by his peers for not going along.

He feels he can't talk to his parents about it because he thinks they won't understand his situation, so he struggles with the problem alone.

A problem like this may seem strictly a personal matter, but most communities have recognized that youth problems are society's problems.

Concern for helping youth, giving a teen a place to go and someone to whom he can talk, has led to the development in Schaumburg Township of several youth-service programs which provide counseling, guidance, job-referral assistance, crisis-hotline aid and health services.

THE PROGRAMS are necessary but cost thousands of dollars annually. In Schaumburg Township, for example, the board of auditors this fiscal year appropriated $62,000 for its youth-services division called Spectrum. The allocation is one that has climbed yearly, as have requests for the division's services.

In 1973, Spectrum counselors worked with 428 persons in 216 counseling cases. Many more were contacted through the township's Outreach program, through which a counselor goes into the community to help persons seeking assistance. The counseling is done at township offices in the Butterly Office Building, 103 S. Roselle Rd., Schaumburg.

Figures for 1974 will be even higher, says youth director Larry Walker, a graduate of George Williams College with a degree in applied behavioral sciences.

"I'm sure we're more than doubled that counseling figure (in 1974) because in 1973 we had only two counselors and in 1974 we had four," he said. "And in a three-month period (in 1974) we've already broken the Outreach total of 1973."

THE INCREASE in the numbers seeking counseling may stem from several factors, Walker says, including the possibility that persons are more aware of the services and so make more use of them.

Also, because two more counselors were added in 1974, the program probably is more "visible" in the community, he says.

Schaumburg Township's youth-services program has been operating for about 4½ years, although the name Spectrum was adopted in June.

"When I first started (almost three years ago)," Walker says, "the budget was about $30,000. The biggest increase has come in staffing. I was the only full-time person when I started. We now have four full-time people plus a secretary."

Expanding programming has come not only because of greater need but because of the township's recognition of youth needs that always existed, Walker said.

SPECTRUM'S SERVICES are not limited to youth counseling. Walker said Spectrum is a single name for community programs the township offers, including individual, group and family counseling.

The Regional Youth Service Bureau, funded in part by the township, offers crisis-hotline service as well as health services for youths. Its director is Margaret E. Herman, former coordinator of the North Shore Help Line in Highland Park. The bureau's 24-hour hotline telephone number is 359-7490. The bureau is operated out of The Bridge Youth Services office, 434½ E. Northwest Hwy., Palatine.

The township also operates a Youth Employment Service, a free job-placement service for youth.

The problems youth experience today in many cases are not different from problems every generation has encountered growing up, most counselors agree. Coping with those problems today usually is the difference.

Often, youth seeking counseling are looking for self-identity, Walker says.

"WE HAVE A LOT of young people who are looking for some way of selecting and deciding for themselves what they want in life. We have people coming as young as 11 to the early 20s, but I would say the median age is about 16 and 17."

The agency uses a bus for special outings. The bus was purchased with a special $10,000 grant from the township's federal revenue-sharing allotment. Another $19,000 in federal revenue-sharing money also was provided by the township to begin and operate the regional youth services bureau.

"I think the township itself has been involved in many aspects of youth and human services," Walker says.

Gauging the success of counseling programs is not always an easy assessment to make, most youth counselors say. Sometimes, though, feedback from those being helped may be an indicator.

"It depends on the situation," Walker said. "I think our best feedback is from people who are referred to us — in which they have to come to see us. The good sign is when they come back to us on their own."

Pat said she hopes students at Schaumburg High will make participation in the blood program an annual event.

UNDER SCHAUMBURG'S program, administrated by the Mid-American Chapter of the American Red Cross, blood needs of all Schaumburg residents are fully insured, provided a minimum of 4 percent of the population donates annually.

Blood-dependent relatives also are covered even if they do not live in the village.

Mrs. Nagy is "enthusiastic" about the lowering of age requirements and said she feels it will be easier to attain the village's annual 1,200-pint quota through special bloodmobile scheduling at the high school, even though all seniors may not be old enough to donate.

to 10 p.m. at International Village Recreation Center, 1220 E. Algonquin Rd.

Appointments may be made by contacting the Schaumburg health department, 894-4500, or Mrs. Nagy, 529-1245.

2 indicted in backdating of Nixon papers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Watergate grand jury Wednesday indicted an attorney and a document appraiser for their parts in backdating former President Richard M. Nixon's gift of vice presidential papers to the National Archives.

The Nixon's 1969 tax return showed the gift, valued at $367,000, was made March 27, 1969. Actually, the papers granting the gift were signed and notarized April 10, 1970 — well after Congress passed a law sharply cutting back tax benefits for gifts made after July 23, 1969.

The indictment named Los Angeles attorney Frank DeMarco Jr., 49, and Chicago appraiser Ralph G. Newman, 63.

Former White House deputy assistant Edward L. Morgan, who already has pleaded guilty for his part in backdating the gift, was named an unindicted co-conspirator. Morgan was sentenced in December to four months in prison and 20 months probation.

DeMARCO WAS charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States, making false statements to the Internal Revenue Service, and obstructing an inquiry of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

Frank DeMarco Jr.

Ralph G. Newman

Newman was charged with conspiracy to defraud, and with assisting in the preparation of a false document filed with a federal income-tax return.

The court said conviction for conspiracy to defraud and for making false statements to the IRS carry maximum penalties of five years and a $10,000 fine on each count; obstructing a congressional inquiry five years and $5,000; and assisting in preparing a false statement three years and $5,000.

IN A STATEMENT from his Los Angeles law office, DeMarco said he had a "strange feeling of relief" in knowing the matter was about to come to some form of final resolution.

"I have been living under a cloud of doubt for over a year ever since Mr. Nixon's tax troubles first came to light and I welcome the chance to vindicate myself," he said.

"I have done nothing wrong. I have conspired with no one, in my judgment. I have made some mistakes but they were neither intentional nor criminal."

After the IRS ruled against Nixon's deductions, he agreed to pay almost $500,000 in back taxes and interest penalties. He said his personal savings would be "virtually wiped out."

NIXON'S pre-presidential papers were moved to storage facilities under control of the General Services Administration March 26-27, 1969. But this act itself was not claimed to constitute the "gift," the indictment said, adding that DeMarco, Newman and Morgan took various parts in having a Nixon deed actually transferring the material to the government fraudulently backdated to March 27, 1969.

The IRS audit division began a reaudit of the Nixon tax returns Dec. 7, 1973, and continued into 1974. The GSA and the joint congressional committee entered the investigation in 1974 at the request of Nixon.

The indictment said that during these investigations, "the conspirators would conceal and cause the concealment of various documents . . ." and "would destroy and cause the destruction of other such documents."

Newman known for Abe work

Ralph G. Newman, indicted Wednesday in the backdating of former President Richard M. Nixon's vice presidential papers, is a historian most noted for his dissertations on the life and times of Abraham Lincoln and his accounts of the Civil War.

Newman, president of the board of the Chicago Public Library and a private bookseller, served as appraiser for numerous American Presidents and was paid more than $12,000 for the work he did for Nixon.

The papers, Newman said later, were probably worth more than the $576,000 he said they were worth in 1970. He has estimated their revised worth at more than $1 million.

Newman, 63, attended four colleges and received doctor of letters and doctor of laws degrees. He is the founder of the Abraham Lincoln Book Shop Inc., Chicago, owner of the Americana House Publishing Co., and recipient of several awards for his literary work, including several books he authored or edited.

"possibly connect the taxpayer with the preparation of the return" — thus providing the basis for a fraud penalty against Nixon. The question became moot when President Ford pardoned Nixon Sept. 9 for all Watergate-related offenses.

Zajonc, LaDore blast trustee

Independents agree Fonte spurred their campaigns

by JOANN VAN WYE
(A news analysis)

Two independent candidates for the Palatine Village Board have cited actions by GOP Trustee Richard W. Fonte as a primary reason they decided to run against the Republican slate April 15.

Trustee Fred H. Zajonc, an independent candidate, said he was ready to step down after eight years on the board until Fonte personally attacked him in a keynote speech he delivered at the GOP convention to select village board candidates.

"I don't know why he picked on me but I am not going to be scared off," Zajonc said. "I did not intend to run this time until that happened," he added.

Thomas LaDore, an independent candidate, also directed his criticism of the board at Fonte.

FONTE AND LaDore have clashed several times over an ethics ordinance the board adopted. The ethics ordinance requires the brokers of real-estate salesmen serving the village to sign a disclaimer form that they will not profit from any real estate their salesman acts on as a village official.

LaDore says the ethics ordinance is discriminatory against real-estate salesmen and blames Fonte for it.

"Mr. Fonte is nothing but a carpetbagger who wants to take over the town," LaDore said, referring to Fonte's rapid rise in the Palatine Township Republican Organization since he moved to the village in 1972.

Richard W. Fonte

Fonte is village trustee and recently was elected president of the Palatine Township Republican Club. He has been active in several areas of the Palatine Township Republican Organization.

"I hope these people aren't running because of personalities. The election should be based on issues, not personalities," Fonte said, adding he has no intention of getting into name-calling.

GOP TRUSTEE Bryan P. Coughlin Jr.

Independents refuse GOP debate

Two independent candidates for the Palatine Village Board say they will not accept the Republican candidates' challenge to a debate on the issues in the April 15 election.

"I don't have the time. I debate with them every Monday and that's enough," said Trustee Fred H. Zajonc, in reference to the weekly village board meetings. Zajonc is seeking reelection as an independent.

Thomas LaDore, another independent candidate, said he believes a debate would be a waste of time but said he would gladly debate the Republicans on the ethics ordinance and land use within the village.

Patricia Miramonti was the only independent candidate who said she would accept the challenge to a debate, but doubted it would accomplish anything.

GOP TRUSTEE Bryan P. Coughlin Jr.

issued the challenge to the independents for a debate. Coughlin, Philip E. Stern and John V. Serio all have the Republican endorsement for the village election.

"The people of Palatine must decide on the direction of their government in April. I think face-to-face debates will help them make their choice," Coughlin said.

Zajonc and LaDore agreed the candidates would have an opportunity to exchange their views when they met before homeowners and civic groups and there is no need for a debate.

"There is no need to challenge anyone to a debate. They will hear about my platform," LaDore said.

Coughlin raised several questions in his statement calling for the debate, including the independents' stand on taxes, ethics and flood-prevention controls.

Solutions don't come easily, but proposals abound...

by KAREN BLECHA
Last of a series

If some doctors have their way, an arbitration board would decide how much money you could collect for medical malpractice.

If lawyers have their way, filing a lawsuit still would be the way to get compensated.

Arbitration and continued use of the courts are only two solutions proposed to the crisis caused by the rapid rise in medical malpractice suits and the high cost of malpractice insurance. Proposals include:

* Voluntary or mandatory arbitration. A patient would sign an agreement to submit any malpractice claims to arbitration rather than court. A board of doctors, attorneys and laymen would hear charges and make judgments. Some proposals include setting a $200,000 limit on awards. Some set specific damages which would be awarded each injury.

The Illinois Hospital Assn. and Illinois State Medical Society favor trying out

such a plan that they believe would speed handling of claims and possibly save money. The Chicago and Illinois Bar Associations oppose it because they do not think patient would get as good a deal before a panel of arbitrators as they would in court.

* No-fault insurance. Physicians or patients would buy insurance under which aggrieved patients could collect for malpractice, based on an injury-damages schedule, without trial and without large lawyers' fees.

Opponents, including insurance companies, say there is no way to define what would be compensable injury under no-fault. Doctors believe the compensation should include medical expenses and loss of wages but none for pain and suffering because they say it is impossible to evaluate.

Proponents say local medical societies could define the injuries they would pay for.

Filing suit against a doctor or hospital is not the only way to get results on a medical complaint.

Four hospitals in the Northwest suburbs have patient-relations programs to take care of gripes. People with complaints about their doctors can go to the Chicago Medical Society or the Illinois Dept. of Education and Registration.

"We would prefer that patients come to us before going to court," said Brother Felix Bettendorf, president-chief executive officer at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village. He said patients with complaints can report them to the administration or to the medical director of the hospital.

AT HOLY FAMILY Hospital in Des Plaines, a patient with a complaint can take it to the nurse-in-charge or to one of the nurses assigned to patient relations. If a patient cannot get satisfaction, he can take his complaint to administration.

"If a patient falls or is injured in the hospital he would receive medical care and an X-ray to determine the extent of injury at no charge," said Jim McQuaid, hospital spokesman.

McQuaid and Ann Finney, in charge of patient relations at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, suggest patients with complaints about their doctors talk it over with the doctor first. Mrs. Finney said a patient can file a written complaint with the hospital medical staff.

GRIEVANCES ABOUT physicians are investigated by the Chicago Medical Society, which tries to act as mediator between patient and physician, said Lee Forres, assistant to the executive administrator.

"We do not have any power or authority over doctors," he said. "But about 75 per cent of the time our mediation works."

If a patient with a serious complaint cannot get action, he can take his grievance to the Dept. of Education and Registration, which licenses doctors in Illinois.

On a formal complaint, a hearing would be held before the medical-licensing committee, which has the power to revoke a doctor's license.

Parents rap space usage at Paddock

by KATHERINE BOYCE

A parents' group protesting overcrowding at Paddock School has criticized a decision to turn an unused former kitchen at the school into a districtwide film library.

"This is not the end of town to stick offices," said Alice Doyle, whose children attend the school, 225 W. Washington St., Palatine.

The room at Paddock should be used for small-group instruction or as an art or music room, Mrs. Doyle said. Paddock School has a cafeteria which serves as a multipurpose room and is one of the few schools in the district with a gymnasium. By using the extra room as another all-purpose room the parents feel it could relieve overcrowding in some classes at different periods of the day.

The parents say empty classrooms at some schools in Rolling Meadows could be used for the film library. Mrs. Doyle said her question and the questions of other parents at Paddock School are not being answered by the school administration.

Supt. FRANK WHITELEY of Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 said the film library is being placed at Paddock because it is centrally located in the district and close to the administration center.

The room has been earmarked for administrative purposes for several years. This summer Dist. 15 plans to purchase a computer and house it in the administration building in the room where the film library is now located.

Whiteley said Paddock School is crowded because students from the western section of the district are bused there. That problem will be solved in September 1976 when the district opens a school in the Winston Knolls subdivision. Many students from the western section of the district will be able to attend the school, relieving crowded conditions at Paddock.

Zoning board to hear bid for warehouse

The Palatine Zoning Board will hear a request tonight for a change in zoning to permit the construction of a warehouse in the 600 block of W. Colfax Street.

Harry Bernstein wants the zoning changed from single-family residential to industrial. Several variations in front, side and rear-yard footage also are requested.

The industrial zoning complies with the village's master plan and existing land use in the area. The hearing will be at 8 p.m. at the Slade Street Fire Station, 117 W. Slade St.

and Pleasant Hills schools, he said.

The average class size at Paddock is about 32 students, said Whiteley, while the district average is about 27. But Whiteley said there are 18 or 19 teacher aides at Paddock so "the ratio of child to adult is quite good." An additional classroom might reduce the average class size at one grade level, but it would do nothing for the other grades, he said.

The teachers at Paddock don't have strong feelings about the use of the room, said Bobbie Sanborn, president of the Dist. 15 Classroom Teachers Council. "Teachers really don't have input into that decision and it's really the administration's decision to make," she said.

THE DISPUTE between the group of parents at Paddock School and the school administration goes deeper than the use of the room. The parents say there is a general lack of communication between them and school officials. In the past three years they have asked questions about supervision of playgrounds, use of teacher aides, test scores and curriculum. Mrs. Doyle said most of those questions have not been answered.

"It's been a constant battle of little things," Mrs. Doyle said. "Neither the district nor the school board is too terribly interested in how we feel."

Parent Dianne Becker added, "Maybe they think they know what is good for us. The main problem is communication. They may have very valid reasons for these things but they don't let it be known."

The school's reaction has been "more pacification than information," said parent Juanita Andronachio. "Sometimes our interests are taken negatively like we're trying to upset the apple cart."

"You don't want to become the local grouch," Mrs. Doyle added.

BUT WHITELEY said he and Paddock Principal Earle Leaf have talked to parents. In December, a parents advisory council was formed to bring the complaints of parents to the school. The council no longer holds regular meetings but has agreed to meet periodically as complaints arise.

"I do listen when people come to me with complaints," said Whiteley, but "after a while it becomes a nitpicking circumstance and then you have to say 'I'm sorry' and go on." Sometimes, he said, "No matter what you do it isn't going to be enough."

Spinnaker Cove owners rap apartments

Residents of the Spinnaker Cove subdivision in Palatine Wednesday objected to rezoning for a proposed apartment complex near their homes, saying the plan lacks details.

Ten homeowners appeared before the County Zoning Board of Appeals in Chicago where village officials also objected to the rezoning of the Prairie Brook Apartments, Rand and Baldwin roads, Palatine Township. Village officials

Independents unite against Fonte

"I have had enough of the Republicans as represented by this group. I can't associate myself with these people," Zajone said.

Zajone criticized Fonte's ethics ordinance as ruling out all but professional politicians from serving the village, and charged him with mismanaging finances, being dishonest with the citizens and attempting to take over control of the village.

Zajone said he felt Fonte was trying to use Palatine Township as a power base and a stepping stone for higher office.

Fonte DENIES charges of trying to take over the local GOP. He says he was just lucky he was elected to the board so soon after moving to the village and said many Republicans didn't want to run in 1973 because they thought the Village Independent Party had the election wrapped up. Fonte says anyone can become involved with the Republican organization's open-door policy and he has just taken the time to become active.

"If these people are dissatisfied (with the township GOP organization) they should come in and work. They can't get involved by standing on the outside," Fonte said.

Bernard E. Pedersen, GOP committeeman, said he was also not aware of any rift in the party between the old-timers and new people. "As far as I can see they cooperate and help each other," he added.

Fonte said there are enough issues the independent candidates and Republican candidates differ on that could be the basis of a campaign without involving personalities. He cited ethics, flood-prevention controls and taxes as issues.

The zoning board took no action on the objections and asked the homeowners and village officials to present details of their opposition by March 3. The zoning board is expected to make a recommendation on rezoning to the County Board March 5.

THE PRAIRIE Brook Apartments were named in a federal grand jury indictment as being one of the projects in which the landowner was forced to make a payoff to Bonk. Bonk is accused of extorting $10,000 from landowner Melvin Eisenstein in return for zoning for the apartment complex.

Developer Michael Kroizer is seeking zoning board approval to include a commercial complex in the project and to change the location of several two-to-six-story apartment buildings. More than 2,000 apartment units are planned on 94 acres along Baldwin Road south of Rand Road.

GOP board hopefuls plan listen-in today

Republican candidates for the Palatine Village Board plan a listen-in at 8 p.m. today at Winston Park Junior High School, 900 E. Palatine Rd., to hear the concerns of residents.

Ideas and concerns expressed at the listen-in will be used by the Republicans in forming their platform for the upcoming April 15 election. Tonight's listen-in is the final one the Republicans have planned.

The Republican candidates for the village board are Trustees Bryan P. Coughlin Jr., Philip E. Stern and John V. Serlo. Independent challengers for the three seats up for election are Trustee Fred H. Zajone, Thomas LaDore and Pat Miramonti.

2 indicted in backdating of Nixon papers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Watergate grand jury Wednesday indicted an attorney and a document appraiser for their parts in backdating former President Richard M. Nixon's gift of vice presidential papers to the National Archives.

The Nixons' 1969 tax return showed the gift, valued at $367,000, was made March 27, 1969. Actually, the papers granting the gift were signed and notarized April 10, 1970 — well after Congress passed a law sharply cutting back tax benefits for gifts made after July 25, 1969.

The indictment named Los Angeles attorney Frank DeMarco Jr., 49, and Chicago appraiser Ralph G. Newman, 63.

Former White House deputy assistant Edward L. Morgan, who already has pleaded guilty for his part in backdating the gift, was named an unindicted co-conspirator. Morgan was sentenced in December to four months in prison and 20 months probation.

DEMARCO WAS charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States, making false statements to the Internal Revenue Service, and obstructing an inquiry of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

Frank DeMarco Jr.

Ralph G. Newman

Newman was charged with conspiracy to defraud, and with assisting in the preparation of a false document filed with a federal income-tax return.

The court said conviction for conspiracy to defraud and for making false statements to the IRS carry maximum penalties of five years and a $10,000 fine on each count; obstructing a congressional inquiry five years and $5,000; and assisting in preparing a false statement three years and $5,000.

IN A STATEMENT from his Los Angeles law office, DeMarco said he had a "strange feeling of relief" in knowing the matter was about to come to some form of final resolution.

"I have been living under a cloud of doubt for over a year ever since Mr. Nixon's tax troubles first came to light and I welcome the chance to vindicate myself," he said.

"I have done nothing wrong. I have conspired with no one, in my judgment. I have made some mistakes but they were neither intentional nor criminal."

After the IRS ruled against Nixon's deductions, he agreed to pay almost $500,000 in back taxes and interest penalties. He said his personal savings would be "virtually wiped out."

NIXON'S pre-presidential papers were moved to storage facilities under control of the General Services Administration March 26-27, 1969. But this act itself was not claimed to constitute the "gift," the indictment said, adding that DeMarco, Newman and Morgan took various parts in having a Nixon deed actually transferring the material to the government fraudulently backdated to March 27, 1969.

The IRS audit division began a reaudit of the Nixon tax returns Dec. 7, 1972, and continued into 1974. The GSA and the joint congressional committee entered the investigation in 1974 at the request of Nixon.

The indictment said that during these investigations, "the conspirators would conceal and cause the concealment of various documents . . ." and "would destroy and cause the destruction of other such documents."

Newman known for Abe work

Ralph G. Newman, indicted Wednesday in the backdating of former President Richard M. Nixon's vice presidential papers, is a historian most noted for his dissertations on the life and times of Abraham Lincoln and his accounts of the Civil War.

Newman, 63, attended four colleges and received doctor of letters and doctor of laws degrees. He is the founder of the Abraham Lincoln Book Shop Inc., Chicago, owner of the Americana House Publishing Co., and recipient of several awards for his literary work, including several books he authored or edited.

The papers, Newman said later, were probably worth more than the $376,000 he said they were worth in 1970. He has estimated their revised worth at more than $1 million.

He is the founder of the Abraham Lincoln Book Shop Inc., Chicago, owner of the Americana House Publishing Co., and recipient of several awards for his literary work, including several books he authored or edited.

"possibly connect the taxpayer with the preparation of the return" — thus providing the basis for a fraud penalty against Nixon. The question became moot when President Ford pardoned Nixon Sept. 9 for all Watergate-related offenses.

Ex-legislator Carroll to succeed Juckett

John W. (Bill) Carroll of Park Ridge, who served 16 years in the Illinois General Assembly before his retirement in 1972, has been named interim successor to Rep. Robert S. Juckett, R-Park Ridge, who died Feb. 2.

Carroll, 67, said Wednesday he will serve out Juckett's unexpired 4th District term and will not seek a full term in 1976.

The four Republican township committeemen responsible for appointing Juckett's successor said they will name a nine-member committee to select a GOP candidate for the seat in 1976. Candidates must file petitions for nomination by mid-December of this year.

Carroll was elected to the House of Representatives in 1958. After 10 years in the House, he was elected to the Senate where he served six years. He retired in 1972 due to poor health, but said Wednesday his health has been restored.

CARROLL, publisher of Pickwick Publishing Co., said Wednesday he was asked to take the appointment because of his legislative experience and because the large number of applicants for the House seat made a difficult choice for the committeemen.

He also said he had no specific legislative proposals. "I will just work for whatever the people in the district seem to need most," Carroll said.

John W. Carroll

Carroll served for many years, both in the House and Senate, as chairman of a special investigating committee for the Illinois Public Aid Commission.

In his first term as a representative, when his legislative district extended from Evanston to Elgin, Carroll convened a conference of mayors which evolved into the Northwest Municipal Conference.

BEFORE HIS first election, he served four years as administrative assistant to Lt. Gov. John William Chapman (under Gov. William Stratton).

If some doctors have their way, an arbitration board would decide how much money you could collect for medical malpractice.

Proponents say local medical societies could define the injuries they would pay for.

Mount Prospect police will ask for a 15 per cent salary hike tonight when they begin negotiating with village officials, the Herald has learned.

The figure is higher than the estimated 12 per cent cost-of-living increase police union officials say took place during the past year. Village and police union officials declined to comment on any specific ic negotiating demands.

Last week, however, Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley accused the police union of making "excessive demands" for the 1975-76 budget in light of present economic conditions.

EPPLEY SAID the Combined Counties Police Assn. is asking for "considerable fringe benefits" in addition to a pay increase and a redefinition of overtime.

"They just have made demands in every possible field at just incredible expense to the village," Eppley said last week. "They have shown no feeling for the economic conditions."

The fringe package being sought includes several items requested in the previous two years' bargaining but not granted by the village. Among these are deduction of union dues by the village from patrolmen's salaries and dental-health insurance, the Herald has learned.

The policemen also reportedly are asking for an expanded vacation package.

Eppley said he expected little action at tonight's negotiating session. "It's just a first meeting to make sure everyone understands what is written down," he said.

LAST YEAR the police were granted an 8.5 per cent salary increase rather than the "substantial increase" — reportedly 13 per cent — they sought.

Fringe benefits granted last year included an increase in longevity pay, an increased clothing allowance and an additional personal day.

Negotiations are conducted privately between a team of village officials and the police union's attorney. The village's team includes Eppley, the village attorney, village finance director and a special outside attorney.

The village negotiates each year with only two employee groups. The police union conducts formal negotiations with the village, while informal talks are conducted with the wage committee of the fire department.

are asking only for a salary adjustment for cost-of-living increases, which he said was "more reasonable" than police demands.

Jack Gniot, president of the Mount Prospect police union, declined to comment Wednesday on either the 15 per cent salary increase demand or other negotiating points.

"I'm not free to get into that. I think one of our ground rules has been that once we start we don't say anything until it is over," Gniot said.

Boundaries to be discussed

A citizens committee in Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 will discuss possible school boundary changes at 8 p.m. today at the administration building, 990 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling.

The committee will prepare suggestions for 1975-76 school boundaries and look into long-range boundary possibilities.

Growing enrollments at Field, Tarkington and Alcott schools may require boundary changes next year. The schools are at capacity this year and expect increased enrollment during the next several years.

The committee is expected to complete its report by March 13.

OK sought to build

9 houses on Meier Rd.

A developer is seeking village permission to build nine houses on the east side of Meier Road south of Mark Terrace in Mount Prospect.

The homes would be built around a new cul-de-sac, Campbell Court, under the plan presented Wednesday night by developer James Sheehan to the village planning commission. Sheehan is seeking approval of his plat of subdivision. He said the homes would be priced about $70,000 each.

The planning commission took no action on Sheehan's request because the village engineer had not submitted a report on the proposed plan.

THESE SPARRING PARTNERS make use of the new ring at Lions Park Recreation Center to show off their newly acquired boxing skills. The youngsters are part of a year-old boxing program taught by former professional boxer Farouk Hassan. The program is open to youngsters 10 years and older.

Who said boxing is a dying sport?

Former champ finds
kids who think it's fun

There were no winners and no losers Saturday when 20 young boxers met to show off their pugilistic skills in the basement of the Lions Park Recreation Center.

The matches, designed to allow parents to see their children's progress, were primarily sparring. The boxing show was the end product of several weeks of work through the Mount Prospect Park District boxing program, which is the brainchild of Farouk Hassan, a former professional boxer.

The program began about a year ago when Hassan approached a park board member about starting a boxing program. Hassan worked with the park district's Greg Repede to develop the program which has attracted about 25 to 30 boys for each 10-week session.

Repede said the park district was probably the first in the area to begin a boxing program. He said he looked for other programs when he needed information on starting a boxing program, but couldn't find any. "Mr. Hassan hadn't taught the program before so he wasn't real sure what he needed or how it would work," Repede said.

MORE RECENTLY, Repede said he has noticed that other park districts are beginning to offer boxing programs. "I've seen a couple in brochures more recently," he said.

Hassan, who was a Golden Gloves winner in Detroit, uses two assistants to help coach youngsters 10 years and older. While the entire group works out together, the youngsters are divided according to age and ability.

One of the assistants, Jerry Lee, also provided the park district with its first boxing ring. Lee constructed the ring himself and donated it to the park district. The ring can be put up and taken down for other activities in the basement.

Repede said the boxing program is an experiment that has been successful. "They enjoy it," he said of those who participate in the program. "We have a number of kids who have been with it the whole time."

THE PROPER boxing gear may look it is part of the training offered awkward on a youngster this size, but through the Mount Prospect Park District.

Boundary changes made in expectation of a flood of children at three schools in Des Plaines and Mount Prospect because 85 children were expected to move into three Mount Prospect apartment complexes this year.

The changes were made in the boundaries of Brentwood and High Ridge Knolls schools in Des Plaines and John Jay School in Mount Prospect because 85 children were expected to move into three Mount Prospect apartment complexes this year.

The citizens' boundary committee estimated 56 children would eventually attend Brentwood from the Crystal Towers and Forest Cove apartment complexes.

They estimated 26 would come from Laurel Estates apartments to High Ridge Knolls.

BUT WITH Crystal Towers about half built and Forest Cove nearing completion, Brentwood School has received only three students and it is estimated only 10, rather than 56, will attend when the units are completed later this year.

Construction problems have delayed Laurel Estates and that complex has no residents. So High Ridge Knolls has none of the estimated 29 projected to come from that complex.

Meanwhile, each building was assigned one extra teacher this year in anticipation of an influx of students. Salaries for the two extra teachers is estimated at $20,000.

Board member Judy Zanca has charged the whole boundary question, which caused bitter feelings on the part of Des Plaines residents in the two school areas, was a "smokescreen" engineered by former Supt. James Erviti to duck other issues.

Erviti, whose forced resignation was accepted in December, was in the midst of negotiating a settlement of his contract with the board in August. Mrs. Zanca, who consistently opposed the boundary changes, said the changes were not necessary but were a diversion to take the heat off the controversy swirling around Erviti.

OTHER SOURCES in the district have confirmed Mrs. Zanca's assertion that Erviti wanted to take the heat off himself with another issue.

Opponents to the boundary changes wanted to wait and see what enrollment would come from the apartments.

Disheartened by the failure of their projections to come true and the controversy that engulfed their committee, members of the boundary committee are at a loss to explain what happened.

"The whole thing just turned into a fiasco," said Nita Stamm, committee chairman.

A great deal of confusion on the committee resulted over what multiplier would be used to determine how many children would move into the complex, she said. The multiplier is a factor used to determine the number of children expected to come from the apartments.

"If any committee is formed to study those boundaries again, they'd better take a long look at that multiplier," said committee member Marilyn Magsamen. "Let's face it, we blew it."

Committee member Erwin Poklacki said he intends to get the boundaries changed back to the old boundaries. "That's ridiculous," said Poklacki when informed of how his committee's predictions have turned out.

The village board approved development of the plan last month, saying it would provide the village with some protection against unwanted housing projects. It will allow the village to object to housing projects that do not comply with the plan.

The meeting will begin at 8:30 p.m. at the village hall, 112 E. Northwest Hwy.

Permits issued to resume work on Lincoln Square

Mount Prospect officials are issuing building permits to resume construction of the Lincoln Square subdivision.

Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley said the developers, Koplan-Braun Inc., "were for financial reasons unable to finish some of the homes." The subdivision is near Meier Road and Lincoln Street on the western edge of the village.

Subcontractors working on the homes asked the village to issue the building permits in their names so work can resume and they can get their money back. The village board voted to reissue the permits without additional fees.

Trustee Kenneth V. Scholten urged the reissuance of permits, noting the problems which surrounded the old Tally Ho apartments on Busse Road near Algonquin Road. The apartments were halted when partially completed in 1963 because the mortgage-holder went bankrupt. The apartments stood incomplete for eight years before being demolished as a result of a court ruling.

Enthusiasm abounds at kids' plays

The "Tin Man" didn't clank quite right and the "witch" scared one little boy into crying loudly, but that didn't dampen the enthusiasm of several hundred youngsters in the Forest View High School auditorium in Arlington Heights.

The children were there recently to see "Stories for Children," a series of fairy tales, fables, songs and short plays, acted out by Forest View students with occasional help from the youthful audience.

Before the plays began, children "warmed up" with the actors doing mirror exercises in the aisles, carefully duplicating the movements of their older partners. Once the plays began, the audience again helped by finding a place to hide a scared "Peter Rabbit."

At one point, children were called to the stage to tell their favorite joke or story, while the actors acted out the same in the background.

The finale featured a shortened version of the classic musical "The Wizard of Oz," done with a minimum of stage scenery.

A green-faced witch was the hit of the show, except for the scared youngster who broke into loud crying.

At one point onstage, "Dorothy" approached the "Tin Man" and knocked emphatically on his silver-painted suit. Several seconds later, a "clank, clank, clank" came from somewhere offstage.

"How do you think they did that, dad?" asked a 4-year-old.

2 indicted in backdating of Nixon papers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Watergate grand jury Wednesday indicted an attorney and a document appraiser for their parts in backdating former President Richard M. Nixon's gift of vice presidential papers to the National Archives.

The Nixon's 1969 tax return showed the gift, valued at $367,000, was made March 27, 1969. Actually, the papers granting the gift were signed and notarized April 10, 1970 — well after Congress passed a law sharply cutting back tax benefits for gifts made after July 23, 1969.

The indictment named Los Angeles attorney Frank DeMarco Jr., 49, and Chicago appraiser Ralph G. Newman, 63.

Former White House deputy assistant Edward L. Morgan, who already has pleaded guilty for his part in backdating the gift, was named an unindicted co-conspirator. Morgan was sentenced in December to four months in prison and 20 months probation.

DEMARCO WAS charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States, making false statements to the Internal Revenue Service, and obstructing an inquiry of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

Frank DeMarco Jr.

Ralph G. Newman

Newman was charged with conspiracy to defraud, and with assisting in the preparation of a false document filed with a federal income-tax return.

The court said conviction for conspiracy to defraud and for making false statements to the IRS carry maximum penalties of five years and a $10,000 fine on each count; obstructing a congressional inquiry five years and $5,000; and assisting in preparing a false statement three years and $3,000.

IN A STATEMENT from his Los Angeles law office, DeMarco said he had a "strange feeling of relief" in knowing the matter was about to come to some form of final resolution.

"I have been living under a cloud of doubt for over a year ever since Mr. Nixon's tax troubles first came to light and I welcome the chance to vindicate myself," he said.

"I have done nothing wrong. I have conspired with no one, in my judgment. I have made some mistakes but they were neither intentional nor criminal."

After the IRS ruled against Nixon's deductions, he agreed to pay almost $500,000 in back taxes and interest penalties. He said his personal savings would be "virtually wiped out."

NIXON'S pre-presidential papers were moved to storage facilities under control of the General Services Administration March 26-27, 1969. But this act itself was not claimed to constitute the "gift," the indictment said, adding that DeMarco, Newman and Morgan took various parts in having a Nixon deed actually transferring the material to the government fraudulently backdated to March 27, 1969.

The IRS audit division began a readout of the Nixon tax returns Dec. 7, 1973, and continued into 1974. The GSA and the joint congressional committee entered the investigation in 1974 at the request of Nixon.

The indictment said that during these investigations, "the conspirators would conceal and cause the concealment of various documents . . . and would destroy and cause the destruction of other such documents."

Newman known for Abe work

Ralph G. Newman, indicted Wednesday in the backdating of former President Richard M. Nixon's vice presidential papers, is a historian most noted for his dissertations on the life and times of Abraham Lincoln and his accounts of the Civil War.

Newman, president of the board of the Chicago Public Library and a private bookseller, served as appraiser for numerous American Presidents and was paid more than $12,000 for the work he did for Nixon.

The papers, Newman said later, were probably worth more than the $376,000 he said they were worth in 1970. He has estimated their revised worth at more than $1 million.

Newman, 63, attended four colleges and received doctor of letters and doctor of laws degrees. He is the founder of the Abraham Lincoln Book Shop Inc., Chicago, owner of the Americana House Publishing Co., and recipient of several awards for his literary work, including several books he authored or edited.

"possibly connect the taxpayer with the preparation of the return" — thus providing the basis for a fraud penalty against Nixon. The question became moot when President Ford pardoned Nixon Sept. 9 for all Watergate-related offenses.

FOP chapter formed by police in village

by JOE SWICKARD

Members of the Arlington Heights Police Dept. have organized a chapter of the Fraternal Order of Police union.

Twenty-nine of the department's 54 patrolmen have joined the organization and about 20 attended the first general meeting Wednesday night at Arlington Heights Fire Station No. 4.

Although FOP membership is "open to all sworn personnel," no one above the rank of patrolman in the 74-man department has joined.

Some members told of receiving "suggestions" from high-ranking police officers not to join the union.

THE LOCAL CHAPTER was organized, said president Robert Gerth, "... to unify the policemen on this department ... and to serve the people of Arlington Heights a hell of a lot better." Some members also suggested that the union could boost department morale, which one described as "rather low."

Gerth, a 17-year veteran, ruled out any strikes by the FOP. "This is not a militant organization. As long as I am president there will never be a strike, any blue flag or a ticket blitz," he said.

FOP, with headquarters in Forest Park, has chapters in 85 Illinois municipalities, including Buffalo Grove, Elk Grove Village and Hoffman Estates. Local FOP officials have often acted as bargaining agents for the police in other towns, although Gerth said no decision has been made on what role the local chapter will take in salary talks for the new village budget now under consideration.

FOP officials said the department has been suffering morale problems because of internal factions.

"There isn't just one force, there are six. There's traffic and patrol and detectives and juvenile (bureaus). And even those get divided up by commanders and shifts," said one FOP member.

GERTH SAID the FOP could act as a unifying element within the department. However, so far only one patrolman assigned to plainclothes work, juvenile officer Mike Hogan, has joined the chapter.

Citing a "cool reception" from some ranking police officers, including Chief L. W. Calderwood, Gerth said "suggestions" were made to some patrolmen not to join. Among those "suggestions," ac-

Solutions don't come easily, but proposals abound...

by KAREN BLECHA
Last of a series

If some doctors have their way, an arbitration board would decide how much money you could collect for medical malpractice.

If lawyers have their way, filing a lawsuit still would be the way to get compensated.

Arbitration and continued use of the courts are only two solutions proposed to the crisis caused by the rapid rise in medical malpractice suits and the high cost of malpractice insurance. Proposals include:

• Voluntary or mandatory arbitration. A patient would sign an agreement to submit any malpractice claims to arbitration rather than court. A board of doctors, attorneys and laymen would hear charges and make judgments. Some proposals include setting a $200,000 limit on awards. Some set specific damages which would be awarded each injury.

The Illinois Hospital Assn. and Illinois State Medical Society favor trying out

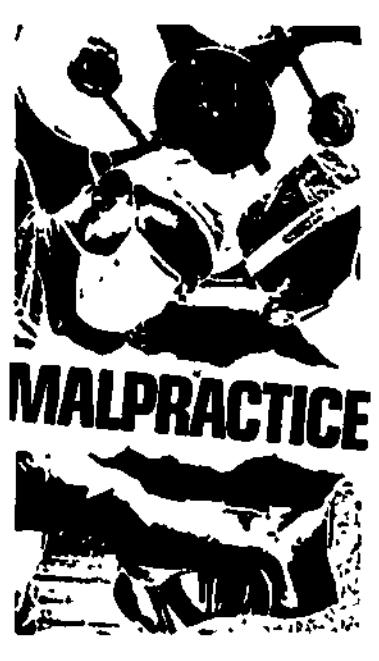

such a plan that they believe would speed handling of claims and possibly save money. The Chicago and Illinois Bar Associations oppose it because they do not think a patient would get as good a deal before a panel of arbitrators as they would in court.

• No-fault insurance. Physicians or patients would buy insurance under which aggrieved patients could collect for malpractice, based on an injury-damages schedule, without trial and without large lawyers' fees.

Opponents, including insurance companies, say there is no way to define what would be compensable injury under no-fault. Doctors believe the compensation should include medical expenses and loss of wages but none for pain and suffering, because they say it is impossible to evaluate.

Proponents say local medical societies could define the injuries they would pay for.

Where patients can go instead of filing lawsuits

Filing suit against a doctor or hospital is not the only way to get results on a medical complaint.

Four hospitals in the Northwest suburbs have patient-relations programs to take care of gripes. People with complaints about their doctors can go to the Chicago Medical Society or the Illinois Dept. of Education and Registration.

"We would prefer that patients come to us before going to court," said Brother Felix Battendorf, president-chief executive officer at Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village. He said patients with complaints can report them to the administration or to the medical director of the hospital.

AT HOLY FAMILY Hospital in Des Plaines, a patient with a complaint can take it to the nurse-in-charge or to one of the nuns assigned to patient relations. If a patient cannot get satisfaction, he can take his complaint to administration.

"If a patient falls or is injured in the hospital he would receive medical care and an X-ray to determine the extent of injury at no charge," said Jim McQuaid, hospital spokesman.

"We also have a safety committee that investigates complaints."

McQuaid and Ann Finney, in charge of patient relations at Northwest Community Hospital in Arlington Heights, suggest patients with complaints about their doctors talk it over with the doctor first. Mrs. Finney said a patient can file a written complaint with the hospital medical staff.

GRIEVANCES ABOUT physicians are investigated by the Chicago Medical Society, which tries to act as mediator between patient and physician. said Lee Forres, assistant to the executive administrator.

"We do not have any power or authority over doctors," he said. "But about 75 per cent of the time our mediation works."

If a patient with a serious complaint cannot get action, he can take his grievance to the Dept. of Education and Registration, which licenses doctors in Illinois.

On a formal complaint, a hearing would be held before the medical-licensing committee, which has the power to revoke a doctor's license.

Bank dealings with second troubled firm told

by PAT GERLACH

A second case of questionable financial dealings between the Schaumburg State Bank and a company that received bank loans while heading into financial difficulties has come to light.

The four loans, totaling $25,500, were made in 1972 and 1973 to Hedges Manufacturing Co., Forest Park. Three of the loans came at a time when the bank controlled the company as trustee of a trust formed by the firm's late owner.

The fourth was made after the trust sold its stock in the company and bank officials acknowledged in court documents that Hedges was in serious financial trouble, court records show.

Operations of the company by the bank led to charges of mismanagement in a lawsuit filed by beneficiaries of the trust. Settlement of the suit has cost bank stockholders more than $163,000, reducing the bank's 1974 net income by 60 percent, the annual report of the bank has disclosed.

ONE OF THE ORIGINAL defendants in the suit was Ward Weaver, then president of the bank, who joined the Hedges board of directors after the bank as trustee took control of the company.

Weaver's purchase of a Schaumburg business that had gone heavily into debt at the bank came under scrutiny of a federal grand jury in 1973. The company, Suburban Aquatics Inc., later went bankrupt. No action was taken by the grand jury and Weaver denied any wrongdoing.

The Hedges stock was included in the estate of Alice Blide, company president who died in 1970. Beneficiaries of the Schaumburg State Bank trust, which held 95 percent of the stock, were Mrs. Blide's daughters, Nancy Jonzen of Chicago and Bonnie Ellis of Battle Creek, Mich.

The remaining five percent of the stock was owned by their cousin, Harry Hedberg of North Riverside, who was vice president of the company.

Weaver and William Kaiser Jr., a bank director and executor of Mrs. Blide's estate, were appointed to the Hedges board of directors after Mrs. Blide's death "in order to find out what was going on and to represent the bank's interest," Weaver said in a recent interview.

BY 1972, THE company was in financial difficulty. The bank made loans to Hedges in January and in August, court records show. In September the sisters filed suit against the bank, charging that bank officials mismanaged the company.

They asked $200,000 damages, charging that losses for 1972 were in excess of $100,000 and represented more than 50 percent of the company's net worth. They charged this was the company's first loss since its founding in 1949.

Also named as defendants in the suit were Kaiser and Weaver, although Weaver was later dropped from the case through an agreement between the plaintiffs and defendants.

Records indicate that Kaiser, in turn, later filed suit against Hedberg, charging he diverted business from the company through unfair business practices. Hedberg has since opened an office equipment manufacturing company in Broadview.

THE BANK MADE another loan to Hedges in November. In January 1973 it was given court permission to sell the trust's Hedges stock after bank officials told the court that Hedges "has been steadily losing money and is without sufficient working capital to continue to meet its payroll and obligations."

The sale was made to Richard Moellering, 355 S. Lincoln Ln., Arlington Heights. The sisters later charged that the bank officials unloaded the stock to Moellering for $70,000, less than the $203,000 value put on the stock by the Internal Revenue Service after Mrs. Blide's death.

Court records show a fourth Schaumburg State Bank loan to Hedges in March 1973.

In July, Moellering filed for reorganization of the company under federal bankruptcy statutes. The company listed assets of $297,000 and liabilities of $334,000. Schaumburg State Bank is among the firm's major creditors, with most of its $25,000 in loans still due.

Moellering has declined to comment about the company, which has been moved to Woodstock, Ill.

WEAVER, found innocent last year of federal charges of conspiracy and bank fraud, is no longer an officer or director of the bank. He said he is a real estate consultant to Brandel Enterprises, owned by Paul W. Brandel, president of Schaumburg State Bank.

THESE SPARRING PARTNERS make use of the new ring at Lions Park Recreation Center to show off their newly acquired boxing skills. The youngsters are part of a year-old boxing program taught by former professional boxer Farouk Hassan. The program is open to youngsters 10 years and older.

THE PROPER boxing gear may look it is part of the training offered awkward on a youngster this size, but through the Mount Prospect Park District.

kids who think it's fun

There were no winners and no losers Saturday when 20 young boxers met to show off their pugilistic skills in the basement of the Lions Park Recreation Center.

The matches, designed to allow parents to see their children's progress, were primarily sparring. The boxing show was the end product of several weeks of work through the Mount Prospect Park District boxing program, which is the brainchild of Farouk Hassan, a former professional boxer.

The program began about a year ago when Hassan approached a park board member about starting a boxing program. Hassan worked with the park district's Greg Repede to develop the program which has attracted about 25 to 30 boys for each 10-week session.

Repede said the park district was probably the first in the area to begin a boxing program. He said he looked for other programs when he needed information on starting a boxing program, but couldn't find any. "Mr. Hassan hadn't taught the program before so he wasn't real sure what he needed or how it would work," Repede said.

MORE RECENTLY, Repede said he has noticed that other park districts are beginning to offer boxing programs. "I've seen a couple in brochures more recently," he said.

Hassan, who was a Golden Gloves winner in Detroit, uses two assistants to help coach youngsters 10 years and older. While the entire group works out together, the youngsters are divided according to age and ability.

One of the assistants, Jerry Lee, also provided the park district with its first boxing ring. Lee constructed the ring himself and donated it to the park district. The ring can be put up and taken down for other activities in the basement.

Repede said the boxing program is an experiment that has been successful. "They enjoy it," he said of those who participate in the program. "We have a number of kids who have been with it the whole time."

Carroll gets Juckett's job

John W. (Bill) Carroll of Park Ridge, who served 16 years in the Illinois General Assembly before his retirement in 1972, has been named interim successor to Rep. Robert S. Juckett, R-Park Ridge, who died Feb. 2.

Carroll, 67, said Wednesday he will serve only Juckett's unexpired 4th District term and will not seek a full term in 1976.

The four Republican township committeemen responsible for appointing Juckett's successor said they will name a nine-member committee to select a GOP candidate for the seat in 1976. Candidates must file petitions for nomination by mid-December of this year.

Carroll was elected to the House of Representatives in 1956. After 10 years in the House, he was elected to the Senate where he served six years. He retired in 1972 due to poor health, but said Wednesday his health has been restored. CARROLL, publisher of Pickwick Publishing Co., said Wednesday he was asked to take the appointment because of his legislative experience and because the large number of applicants for the House seat made a difficult choice for the committeemen.

He also said he had no specific legislative proposals. "I will just work for whatever the people in the district seem to need most," Carroll said.

Carroll served for many years, both in the House and Senate, as chairman of a special investigating committee for the Illinois Public Aid Commission.

In his first term as a representative, when his legislative district extended from Evanston to Elgin, Carroll convened a conference of mayors which evolved into the Northwest Municipal Conference.

BECFORE HIS first election, he served four years as administrative assistant to Lt. Gov. John William Chapman (under Gov. William Stratton).

"They told me it would be for the good of the party, and the Republican Party has been good to me," Carroll said of his return to the legislature.

Woods said he hoped residents would have the financial plan committee's brochure entitled "Shall We Save the Parks?" which explains the need for the referendum, and then decide whether it was an honest presentation.

He identified inadequate long-range financial planning as part of the reason for the crisis in Arlington Heights park maintenance.

"The parks have fallen short in financial planning and there is no doubt that this particular area needs some tightening up in the future," he said.

But unless the proposed referendum is passed now, he said Arlington Heights will wind up with a "second-class" park system.

"If we have a second-rate park system, we've got a second-rate community."

Parks are really vital to a community," he said, citing their contribution to property values, physical fitness and the control of juvenile delinquency.

ALSO CONTRIBUTING to the maintenance problem are the number of swimming pools and other park facilities Arlington Heights residents have approved in past referendums, Woods said.

"In the past the residents have said they want these things. Now we're asking for the money to run and maintain them," he said.

Woods said he hoped residents would have the financial plan committee's brochure entitled "Shall We Save the Parks?" which explains the need for the referendum, and then decide whether it was an honest presentation.

In light of other upcoming referendums, residents will have to decide "where parks fit in their scheme of priorities," he said.

With at least 16 serious candidates who had hoped for appointment to Juckett's seat, a Republican primary for the 1976 election appears a certainty.

Committeemen who made the appointment included Floyd T. Full, of Maine Township, who held the majority of the weighted vote; Fred Yonkers of Wheeling Township; Sen. John Nimrod of Niles Township, and William Bingham of Northfield Township.

Vote won't solve parks' woes: Woods

by KURT BAER

The Arlington Heights Park District's March 1 referendum is not the final solution to the problems of running the parks. But it should support the park district financially for at least the next three years, John G. Woods, chairman of the park district's financial plan committee, said in an interview Wednesday.

Without action by the Illinois General Assembly, Woods predicted a dim future for park districts in Illinois and said problems of maintaining park facilities will crop up again and again.

On March 1, Arlington Heights Park District voters will be presented with three referendums which, if approved, would add about $11.10 to an average homeowner's tax bill.

The money is to be used to repair and maintain existing park facilities. Thirty-nine projects at 22 different parks are planned. Woods said the work would restore the parks to their condition of two years ago.

"Our committee made what I think is a sound decision to go with a minimum referendum package now, with the clear understanding that when we have happier economic times we're going to come back to the citizens with a 'cafeteria' referendum on new facilities," he said.

WOODS SAID he is confident that the first step in a 10-part state legislative relief package he has proposed for park districts will be adopted this year. That step calls for the establishment of a Legislative Study Commission on Parks, Recreation and Open Space.

Gerth said there has been no overt action taken against patrolmen who have joined. "Just a few too many joined," he said.

An informal meeting between Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson and Gerth was held last week, Gerth said. He termed Hanson's reaction as one of surprise, and that the manager was "happy" the police had not aligned with the Combined Counties Police Assn.

Gerth said CCPA was "too militant" and tried to exert "too much pressure" on local chapters. He disputed CCPA president John Flood's statement that Arlington Heights could be signed up if he had 30 minutes to talk with the patrolmen.

"He couldn't do it if he had an hour and 30 minutes," Gerth said.

Gerth said a citizens' auxiliary may be organized among merchants and residents of the village. The auxiliary membership would not make the holder immune to parking or traffic tickets, Gerth said.

Other officials of the local chapter are Ronald Knapp, vice president; Gene Mertlich, secretary; Daryl Stille, treasurer and Hogan, sergeant at arms.

The committee is expected to complete its report by March 13.
